SUDDEN DEATH OF CAPT. A. E. ANDERSON

Widely Known Commander of the Mary Powell Stricken With Apoplexy at Greenkill Park and Dies in a Few Hours.

Captain A. E. Anderson, well known steamboat man and commander of the steamer Mary Powell, was stricken with apoplexy this morning at 5:30 o'clock in his bedroom at Greenkill Park Inn where he was spending the summer and died at 9:40 o'clock. Sunday evening Captain Anderson, who appeared to be in excellent health, attended the song service at the Casino in the park accompanied by his wife, and took part in singing the old gospel hymns. At the close of the service he expressed himself at delighted with the idea of holding such services on Sunday evening to Judge Clearwater who had arranged the service and said he would make it a point to attend the services during the summer. At the conclusion of the service he walked back to the Inn accompanied by his wife and other cottagers.

This morning as soon as it was learned of the captain's illness word was telephoned to Drs. Chandler and A. A. Stern of this city and Dr. Rymph of Bloomington, who hurried to the Inn and administered medical attention.

Captain Anderson was one of the best known men along the Hudson river and his pleasant cheery manner endeared him to all with whom he came in contact.

Captain Absalom Elitine Anderson was born at Saugerties, N. Y., January 11, 1856. At the age of four years his parents moved to Esopus, where he obtained his preliminary education, later attending the Military Institute at Neshaug and Eastman's Business College at Foughkeeps. He then began his career on the Hudson river in connection with the steamer Mary Powell, of which he has been captain and part owner for the past 25 years.

In 1881 Captain Anderson was married to Fannie V. Elmore of Brooklyn. Captain Anderson was one of the most popular commanders on the Hudson and eminently fitted for the position he occupied. His father, Captain Absalom J. Anderson, was born in Croton, N. Y., in 1812, and died in 1886. He was from an honored family who traced their ancestry back to 1580. Among the notable vessels he owned and commanded were the Robert L. Stephen, the Thomas Powell and the Mary Powell.

WRECKED COAL CARS BLOCKED U. & D. ROAD

Fourteen coal cars jumped the tracks of the Ulster & Delaware railroad a short distance east of Mt. Pleasant station on Sunday night and the line was blocked many hours owing to the mass of coal which was dumped on the tracks. The accident occurred about 7:30 o'clock when the train was on its way to Kingston and was due to a broken wheel. That no one was injured in the wreck was due to the fact that most of the trainmen were in the caboose at the time and escaped having the alternative of jumping or going over the bank with the train. The big wrecker was sent out as soon as word was received in Rondout and the officials of the road accompanied it. No trains were running through for a greater part of the morning owing to the large amount of coal and broken cars stacked up along the track. The railroad tracks were ripped up for a considerable distance and it was necessary to relay these before traffic could be resumed. The only train which left Rondout was the 7 a. m. which went as far as the scene of the wreck and transferred passengers being brought from the west end of the road. It was hoped to have traffic restored by the afternoon.

Sunday School Exercises.

The closing exercises of St. John's Sunday school were held in the church on Sunday morning and were especially fitting for a morning service in the church, as the little people recited a number of Bible quotations in a most creditable manner and sang several hymns at the close of the regular "Morning Prayer." The program was as follows: A Welcome, by Dorothy Kennedy, in which that little lady graciously greeted all present in behalf of the Sunday school.

A recitation from the Bible, by Emily McCue. Recitation, Virginia Herdman. Song, by the smaller children of the school. Recitation, from the 13th chapter of Corinthians, by Helen Heiser and Julia Halliday. Recitation, of the 23rd Psalm, Elizabeth Forsyth. Recitation from the Bible, Catharine McConnors. Reading, "The Good Samaritan," Florence Henry. Recitation, "Love, Laughter and Song," Lillian Herdman. Recitation, "Sympathy," Jack Kleiss. Reading, "Polycarp, the Martyr," Ralph Croutham.

Each of the children gave their recitations or readings very well indeed and all made a fitting close to the summer sessions of the Sunday school.

"MOST DOCTORS' WIVES MAD WITH JEALOUSY, AS MRS. CARMAN WAS."

New York, July 13.—"The being who suffers most on this earth is not the outcast, the disgraced, the abused, the misunderstood, the diseased—but the doctor's wife." "Nine-tenths of the doctors' wives," declares Mrs. G. Vere Tyler, widow of Dr. Lachlan Tyler, and daughter-in-law of President Tyler, "are half mad through pain the better part of their lives. The sin they commit in practicing inconscientious torture on their wives is provocative of crime."

"No one can understand the woman's jealousy of her husband's patients unless one has been a doctor's wife. Mrs. Carman, innocent or guilty, has the secret sympathy of thousands of doctor's wives," continued Mrs. Tyler, in a recent interview.

ALMOST A FIGHT IN LONDONDERRY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Londonderry, Ireland, July 13.—An armed conflict between Unionist anti-home rulers and Irish Nationalists was narrowly averted when the celebration of the anniversary of the battle of Boyne began here today. Shortly after daybreak, the Protestant celebrants began firing salutes from a battery of artillery. The artillery was located on an eminence on the outskirts of the city and flaming wadding fell upon the roofs of a number of houses occupied by supporters of home rule. These home rulers, believing that the Unionist forces had begun actual hostilities in a civil war, barricaded themselves and secured fire arms, preparing to fight to the last.

The bombardment suddenly ceased and the home rulers learned that no harm had been meant to them, but excitement continued at fever heat. Angry threats were made by both sides.

While the police force was engaged in preventing disorder at the churches on Sunday, where the Unionist forces had gone to worship their parade, Nationalists filled two big touring cars full of arms and ammunition and ran them through the city. They were secretly cached on the outskirts where the Nationalist volunteers are maintaining a camp and drill grounds.

Many New Church Members.

Sixteen new members were admitted to the First Presbyterian Church on Elmendorf street on Sunday morning at the communion service. Five were admitted upon confession of faith and eleven by letter. A. H. Christian, the leader of the Thursday evening prayer service has announced the topic to be "An Act of Compassion." The verses for consideration will be taken from Mark 10, 46 to 52, and St. Matthew 25, 31 to 40. The theme is found in Matthew 25, the 40th verse.

Thirteenth Days in Jail. Joseph Adams of Newark, N. J., was arrested in Marlborough on Sunday on a charge of petit larceny and sentenced to 30 days in the county jail. Joseph registered at the county hotel on Sunday afternoon.

SEVERE ELECTRIC STORM IN KINGSTON

Barn on Schmidt Estate Struck by Lightning and Occupants of the House Stunned—Many Telephones Out of Commission.

Kingston was visited by the most severe electric storm of the season for an hour Saturday evening, at the height of which lightning struck the barn on the Fritz G. Schmidt estate on Manor avenue, and temporarily stunned the occupants of the main house nearby.

The cupola on the barn was wrecked by the bolt of lightning, which after that damage separated in two forks to reach the ground. One fork followed the roof and side of the barn, tearing off shingles and blistering the paint on the side of the building. The other fork passed through the barn, following one of the main timber supports, and when nearly to the ground it split a big beam.

In the Schmidt mansion, the occupants were stunned by the lightning, and the occupants of the cottage also felt its effect. The employees of the estate rushed to the barn as soon as they recovered from the shock, but found that no fire had resulted from the lightning bolt. They had difficulty in getting the horses and cattle composed. Electricians who examined the building on Sunday said it was marvelous that the barn had not been fired by the lightning.

A large number of telephones and electric lights were affected by the storm and in Port Ewen a number of telephones were put out of order. Linemen put everything in good condition on Sunday.

The storm began giving indications of its presence in the vicinity of the Ashokan region. It did not break until a quarter before 8 o'clock. Another storm that came from the Valley of the Rondout was equally violent, but was swerved in its course by currents of air before reaching Kingston. The two storms appeared to meet east of Kingston, over Dutchess county, where the electrical display continued for several hours. Late in the evening Kingston was passed over by the edge of another electric storm that came from the north-east.

BLISTERING HEAT IN MIDDLE WEST

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, July 13.—Following a day of record breaking heat in the central west, northwest and south, the blistering rays of a mid July sun this morning gave promise of still higher temperature for the coming day. Before the sun was three hours old today, Kansas City reported a temperature of 88 degrees, St. Louis 85, Indianapolis and Birmingham, 80, and other cities in the great reach of country from the Great Lakes to the western extreme of Kansas sent in word of another day of heat.

In northern Ohio, where temperatures yesterday ranged above the nineties, there were showers this morning, which in a measure alleviated the suffering, and there were bunches of clouds conceivable in central and southern Indiana, which, it was hoped, would bring showers during the day.

Fifty-seven cities in the United States yesterday experienced weather 90 degrees or over. It was 100 or over in 12 places, among them being Omaha, St. Louis, Springfield, Illinois, and Cincinnati. At the last named place, street thermometers registered 110 degrees. It was somewhat cooler on the streets in Omaha, only 110 being reported there.

S. S. Athletic League to Meet.

A business meeting of the Sunday School Athletic League will be held at the Y. M. C. A. on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at which time it was hoped that the final schedule for the summer will be arranged. The advisory committee, consisting of Bernard McBride, Floyd Powell, Samuel Gibson, Grove Webster and A. H. Christian, are urged to be present. The following schools are represented in the league and are urged to have a representative present: Trinity M. E. Church of the Redeemer, First Reformed, St. James' M. E., Albany Avenue Baptist, Rondout Presbyterian, St. John's and the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church.

Marooned on Coney Island.

New York, July 13.—Dawn today found the beaches at Coney Island covered with the figures of sleeping men, women and children. Fully 15,000 were caught in the playground of the Metropolis when a blowout in the power station tied up both trolley and elevated lines. The lines worked all night to relieve the congestion caused by the accident but thousands abandoned hope of reaching their home and slept in the open.

Twilight and S. S. League.

In order that there may be no conflict in dates between the teams of the Twilight League and the Sunday School Athletic League, the following schedule is repeated: The Sunday School League will play at the Athletic Field at 6 o'clock on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, while the Twilight League games will be played at the same time and place on Tuesday and Thursday evening.

TWO ITALIANS SHOT AT BROWN'S STATION

Two Italians whose names are unknown are in the hospital of Winston & Company at Brown's Station, with bullet wounds in their bodies and Giuseppe Belli, who did the shooting, is being sought for by the authorities. An argument started among the Italians boarding at Brown's farm this morning and Belli drew a pistol and shot the two men, after which he fled. When last seen he was crossing the Beaverkill. He is about five feet six inches in height and wore dark clothing and was hatless. The wounded men will recover.

I. S. C. C. DENOUNCES MELLEN REGIME

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Washington, July 13.—That the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad system during the period of Charles S. Mellen's presidency, was "a corrupt monopoly," that the directors were criminally negligent in the discharge of their duties; that the subsidiary corporations of the system should be condemned for the part they played in the system and that the remedy for the evils lie in the public conscience and better laws, was the report made by the Interstate Commerce Commission to the senate today on its investigation into the affairs of the railroad.

The commission declares that "the loss to the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. by reason of waste and mismanagement will amount to between sixty and ninety million dollars."

"The splendid property of the New Haven Railroad itself will be called upon for many years to make up the drain upon its resources resulting from the unpardonable folly of the transactions outside the proper field in which stock holders supposed their money were invested," continues the report.

Declaring that most of the directors of the New Haven took their duties lightly, the commission declares that "if these directors, who were faithful to their stewardship, were held responsible in the courts and at the bar of public opinion for the failure to do those things which should have been done, the lesson to directors who do not direct would be very salutary."

"Directors should be made individually liable to civil and criminal laws for the manner in which they discharged their trust. It should be just as grave a crime to plunder stockholders or the public through a railroad corporation as it is to personally rob an individual."

Referring to the manner in which the New Haven directors are alleged to have left the control of the railroad to the "higher ups," the commission says:

"The directors actively or passively acquiesced in the throes of the Mellen-Morgan-Rockefeller regime to extend the domination of this corporation over the whole transportation field in New England."

The acquisition of the Boston & Maine by the New Haven is severely condemned in the report which says: "The management of the Boston & Maine by the New Haven was unwise. It began in illegality and in a lust for extended monopoly, and had resulted in great depreciation and serious impairment of credit."

Song Service at Greenkill Park.

A few days ago the Freeman published an article upon the attractions of Greenkill Park which commanded widespread attention. The cottagers residing in the park and the guests at the Inn on Sunday organized a Sunday evening song service which was held in the old barn, now used as a casino. A passage of Scripture was read by one of the cottagers and a number of old fashioned gospel hymns were sung. The sixty odd people who attended it pronounced it one of the most charming and inspiring services of the kind they ever had attended. It will be continued every Sunday evening until the park is closed.

Rioting in Londonderry.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Londonderry, Ireland, July 13.—An outbreak marked the closing of the Orange Day celebration here this evening when a crowd of Unionist sympathizers attacked St. Patrick's Catholic Hall and smashed all the windows. The crowd was made up of Protestants who had spent the day celebrating the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne.

A Nationalist Riot.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Ballybofey, Ireland, July 13.—The first serious Orange day outbreak to be reported occurred here today. Nationalists attacked the police station and the barracks, smashing all the windows. The police dispersed the mob with riot sticks. Extra police are on duty throughout county Donegal.

Red Monograms Won.

The Red Monograms scored a victory on Sunday afternoon when they defeated Rhinecliff team at McVey's Field by the score of 2 to 0. Throughout the nine innings the game was replete with brilliant plays and the defeat cast no discredit on the victors. Scherer and Cregan were in the points for the locals and Conlin and Robins for Rhinecliff.

SUDDEN DEATH OF CAPT. A. E. ANDERSON

Widely Known Commander of the Mary Powell Stricken With Apoplexy at Greenkill Park and Dies in a Few Hours.

Captain A. E. Anderson, well known steamboat man and commander of the steamer Mary Powell, was stricken with apoplexy this morning at 5:30 o'clock in his bedroom at Greenkill Park Inn where he was spending the summer and died at 9:40 o'clock. Sunday evening Captain Anderson, who appeared to be in excellent health, attended the song service at the Casino in the park accompanied by his wife, and took part in singing the old gospel hymns. At the close of the service he expressed himself at delighted with the idea of holding such services on Sunday evening to Judge Clearwater who had arranged the service and said he would make it a point to attend the services during the summer. At the conclusion of the service he walked back to the Inn accompanied by his wife and other cottagers.

This morning as soon as it was learned of the captain's illness word was telephoned to Mrs. Chandler and A. A. Stern of this city and Dr. Rymph of Bloomington, who hurried to the Inn and administered medical attention.

Captain Anderson was one of the best known men along the Hudson river and his pleasing, cheery manner endeared him to all with whom he came in contact.

Captain Absalom Eltinge Anderson was born at Saugerties, N. Y., January 11, 1856. At the age of four years his parents moved to Esopus, where he obtained his preliminary education, later attending the Military Institute at Neshean and Eastman's Business College at Poughkeepsie. He then began his career on the Hudson river in connection with the steamer Mary Powell, of which he has been captain and part owner for the past 25 years.

In 1881 Captain Anderson was married to Fannie V. Elmore of Brooklyn. Captain Anderson was one of the most popular commanders on the Hudson and eminently fitted for the position he occupied. His father, Captain Absalom J. Anderson, who has been in Greenkill Park since his death, traced their ancestry back to 1530. Among the notable vessels he owned and commanded were the Robert L. Stephen, the Thomas Powell and the Mary Powell.

WRECKED COAL CARS BLOCKED U. & D. ROAD

Fourteen coal cars jumped the tracks of the Ulster & Delaware railroad a short distance east of Mt. Pleasant station on Sunday night and the line was blocked many hours owing to the mass of coal which was dumped on the tracks. The accident occurred about 7:30 o'clock when the train was on its way to Kingston and was due to a broken wheel. That no one was injured in the wreck was due to the fact that most of the trainmen were in the caboose at the time and escaped having the alternative of jumping or going over the bank with the upset cars. The big wrecker was sent out as soon as word was received in Rondout and the officials of the road accompanied it. No trains were running through for a greater part of the morning owing to the large amount of coal and broken cars stacked up along the track. The railroad tracks were ripped up for a considerable distance and it was necessary to relay these before traffic could be resumed. The only train which left Rondout was the 7 a. m. which went as far as the scene of the wreck and transferred passengers being brought from the west end of the road. It was hoped to have traffic restored by the afternoon.

Sunday School Closing Exercises.

The closing exercises of St. John's Sunday school were held in the church on Sunday morning and were especially fitting for a morning service in the church, as the little people recited a number of Bible quotations in a most creditable manner and sang several hymns at the close of the regular "Morning Prayer." The program was as follows:

A Welcome, by Dorothy Kennedy, in which little lady graciously greeted all present in behalf of the Sunday school.
A recitation from the Bible, by Emily McCue.
Recitation, Virginia Herdman.
Song, by the smaller children of the school.
Recitation, from the 13th chapter of Corinthians, by Helen Heiser and Julia Halliday.
Recitation, of the 23rd Psalm, Elizabeth Forsyth.
Recitation, from the Bible, Catharine McConnors.
Reading, "The Good Samaritan," Florence Henry.
Recitation, "Love, Laughter and Song," Lillian Herdman.
Recitation, "Sympathy," Jack Kleiss.
Reading, "Polycarp, the Martyr," Ralph Crouthamel.

Each of the children gave their recitations or readings very well indeed and all made a fitting close to the summer sessions of the Sunday school.

"MOST DOCTORS' WIVES MAD WITH JEALOUSY," AS MRS. CARMAN WAS.

New York, July 13.—"The being who suffers most on this earth is not the outcast, the disgraced, the abused, the misunderstood, the diseased—but the doctor's wife." "Nine-tenths of the doctor's wives," declares Mrs. G. Vere Tyler, widow of Dr. Lachlan Tyler, and daughter-in-law of President Tyler, "are half mad through pain the better part of their lives. The sin they commit in practicing inconscientious torture on their wives is provocative of crime."

"No one can understand the woman's jealousy of her husband's patients unless one has been a doctor's wife. Mrs. Carman, innocent or guilty, has the secret sympathy of thousands of doctor's wives," continued Mrs. Tyler, in a recent interview.

ALMOST A FIGHT IN LONDONDERRY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Londonderry, Ireland, July 13.—An armed conflict between Unionist anti-home rulers and Irish Nationalists was narrowly averted when the celebration of the anniversary of the battle of Boyne began here today. Shortly after daybreak, the Protestant celebrants began firing salutes from a battery of artillery. The artillery was located on an eminence on the outskirts of the city and flaming wadding fell upon the roofs of a number of houses occupied by supporters of home rule. These home rulers, believing that the Unionists had begun actual hostilities in a civil war, barricaded themselves and secured fire arms, preparing to fight to the last.

The bombardment suddenly ceased and the home rulers learned that no harm had been meant to them, but excitement continued at fever heat. Angry threats were made by both sides.

While the police force was engaged in preventing disorder at the churches on Sunday, where the Unionist forces had gone to worship during their parade, Nationalists filled the city with the sound of arms and ammunition and ran them through the city. They were secretly cached on the outskirts where the Nationalist volunteers are maintaining a camp and drill grounds.

Many New Church Members.

Sixteen new members were admitted to the First Presbyterian Church on Elmendorf street on Sunday morning at the communion service. Five were admitted upon confession of faith and eleven by letter. A. Christian, the leader of the Thursday evening prayer service has announced the topic to be "An Act of Compassion." The verses for consideration and discussion will be taken from St. Mark 10, 46 to 52, and St. Matthew 25, 31 to 40. The theme is found in Matthew 25, the 40th verse.

Midsummer Festival.

A midsummer festival under the auspices of the united societies of St. Joseph's Church will be held at Kingston Point on the afternoon and evening of August 19. In the afternoon games for the children will be arranged with suitable prizes which will be donated and in the evening dancing will be enjoyed. Refreshments will be sold at a reasonable price. A fine time is assured all who attend.

Thirty Days in Jail.

Joseph Adams of Newark, N. J., was arrested in Marlborough on Sunday on a charge of petit larceny and was arraigned before Justice Strope and sentenced to 30 days in the county jail. Joseph registered at the county hotel on Sunday afternoon.

SEVERE ELECTRIC STORM IN KINGSTON

Barn on Schmidt Estate Struck by Lightning and Occupants of the House Stunned—Many Telephones Out of Commission.

Kingston was visited by the most severe electric storm of the season for an hour Saturday evening, at the height of which lightning struck the barn on the Fritz G. Schmidt estate on Manor Avenue, and temporarily stunned the occupants of the main house nearby.

The cupola on the barn was wrecked by the bolt of lightning, which after that damage separated in two forks to reach the ground. One fork followed the roof and side of the barn, tearing off shingles and blistering the paint on the side of the building. The other fork passed through the barn, following one of the main timber supports, and when nearly to the ground it split a big beam.

In the Schmidt mansion, the occupants were stunned by the lightning, and the occupants of the cottage also felt its effect. The employees of the estate rushed to the barn as soon as they recovered from the shock, but found that no fire had resulted from the lightning bolt. They had difficulty in getting the horses and cattle composed. Electricians who examined the building on Sunday said it was marvelous that the barn had not been fired by the lightning.

A large number of telephones and electric lights were affected by the storm and in Port Even a number of telephones were put out of order. Linemen put everything in good condition on Sunday.

The storm began giving indications of its presence in the vicinity of the Ashokan region. It did not break until a quarter before 8 o'clock. Another storm that came from the Valley of the Rondout was equally violent, but was averted in its course by currents of air before reaching Kingston. The two storms appeared to meet east of Kingston, over Dutchess county, where the electrical display continued for several hours. Late in the evening Kingston was passed over by the edge of another electric storm that came from the north-east.

BLISTERING HEAT IN MIDDLE WEST

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Chicago, July 13.—Following a day of record breaking heat in the central west, northwest and south, the blistering rays of a mid July sun this morning gave promise of still higher temperature for the coming day. Before the sun was three hours old today, Kansas City reported a temperature of 88 degrees, St. Louis 85, Indianapolis 84, Birmingham 83, and other cities in the great reach of country from the Great Lakes to the western extreme of Kansas sent in word of another day of heat.

In northern Ohio, where temperatures yesterday ranged above the nineties, there were showers this morning, which in a measure alleviated the suffering, and there were bunches of clouds discernible in central and southern Indiana, which, it was hoped, would bring showers during the day.

Fifty-seven cities in the United States yesterday experienced weather 90 degrees or over. It was 100 or over in 12 places, among them being Omaha, St. Louis, Springfield, Illinois, and Cincinnati. At the last named place, street thermometers registered 116 degrees. It was somewhat cooler on the streets in Omaha, only 110 being reported there.

S. S. Athletic League to Meet.

A business meeting of the Sunday School Athletic League will be held at the Y. M. C. A. on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at which time it is expected that the final schedule for the summer will be arranged. The advisory committee, consisting of Bernard McBride, Floyd Powell, Samuel Gibson, Grove Webster and A. H. Christian, are urged to be present. The following schools are represented in the league and are urged to have a representative present: Trinity M. E. Church of the Redeemer, First Reformed, St. James's M. E., Albany Avenue Baptist, Rondout Presbyterian, St. John's and the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church.

Marooned on Coney Island.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, July 13.—Dawn today found the beaches at Coney Island covered with the figures of sleeping men, women and children. Fully 125,000 were caught in the playground of the Metropolis when a blowout in the power station tied up both trolley and elevated lines. The lines worked all night to relieve the congestion caused by the accident but thousands abandoned hope of reaching their home and slept in the open.

Twilight and S. S. League.

In order that there may be no conflict in dates between the teams of the Twilight League and the Sunday School Athletic League, the following schedule is repeated: The Sunday School League will play at the Athletic Field at 6 o'clock on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, while the Twilight League games will be played at the same time and place on Tuesday and Thursday evening.

TWO ITALIANS SHOT AT BROWN'S STATION

Two Italians whose names are unknown are in the hospital of Winston & Company at Brown's Station, with bullet wounds in their bodies and Giuseppe Belli, who did the shooting, is being sought for by the authorities. An argument started among the Italians boarding at Brown's farm this morning and Belli drew a pistol and shot the two men, after which he fled. When last seen he was crossing the Beaverkill. He is about five feet six inches in height and wore dark clothing and was hatless. The wounded men will recover.

I. S. C. C. DENOUNCES MELLEN REGIME

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, July 13.—That the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad system during the period of Charles S. Mellen's presidency, was "a corrupt monopoly," that the directors were criminally negligent in the discharge of their duties; that the subsidiary corporations of the system should be condemned for the part they played in the system and that the remedy for the evils lie in the public conscience and better laws, was the report made by the Interstate Commerce Commission to the senate today on its investigation into the affairs of the railroad.

The commission declares that "the loss to the New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. by reason of waste and mismanagement will amount to between sixty and ninety million dollars."

"The splendid property of the New Haven Railroad, itself will be called upon for many years to make up the drain upon its resources resulting from the unpardonable folly of the transactions outside the proper field in which stock holders supposed their money were invested," continues the report.

Declaring that most of the directors of the New Haven took their duties lightly, the commission declares that "if these directors, who were faithful to their stewardship, were held responsible in the courts for the failure to do those things which should have been done, the lesson to directors who do not direct would be very salutary."

"Directors should be made individually liable to civil and criminal laws for the manner in which they discharged their trust. It should be just as grave a crime to plunder stockholders or the public through a railroad corporation as it is to personally rob an individual."

Referring to the manner in which the New Haven directors are alleged to have left the control of the railroad to the "higher ups," the commission says:

"The directors actively or passively acquiesced in the throes of the Mellen-Morgan-Rockefeller regime to extend the domination of this corporation over the whole transportation field in New England."

The acquisition of the Boston & Maine by the New Haven is severely condemned in the report which says: "The management of the Boston & Maine by the New Haven was unwise. It began in illegality and in a lust for extended monopoly, and had resulted in great depreciation and serious impairment of credit."

Song Service at Greenkill Park.

A few days ago the Freeman published an article upon the attractions of Greenkill Park which commanded widespread attention. The cottagers residing in the park and the guests at the Inn on Sunday organized a Sunday evening song service which was held in the old barn, now used as a casino. A passage of Scripture was read by one of the cottagers and a number of old fashion gospel hymns were sung. The sixty odd people who attended it pronounced it one of the most charming and inspiring services of the kind they ever had attended. It will be continued every Sunday evening until the park is closed.

Rioting in Londonderry.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Londonderry, Ireland, July 13.—An outbreak marked the closing of the Orange Day celebration here this evening when a crowd of Unionist sympathizers attacked St. Patrick's Catholic Hall and smashed all the windows. The crowd was made up of Protestants who had spent the day celebrating the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne.

A Nationalist Riot.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Ballybofey, Ireland, July 13.—The first serious Orange day outbreak to be reported occurred here today. Nationalists attacked the police station and the barracks, smashing all the windows. The police dispersed the mob with riot sticks. Extra police are on duty throughout county Donegal.

Red Monograms Won.

The Red Monograms scored a victory on Sunday afternoon when they defeated Rhinecliff team at McVey's Field by the score of 2 to 0. Throughout the nine innings the game was replete with brilliant plays and the defeat cast no discredit on the visitors. Scherer and Cregan were in the points for the locals and Conlin and Robins for Rhinecliff.

LITTLE ISADORE WENT SWIMMING

Proud Relatives Went to View His New Accomplishment and the Amalgamated Order of Rubber-necks Got Excited.

Just as the church bells were tolling Sunday evening, someone noticed several women running down the lane extending back of the Dr. P. B. Collier property on Manor avenue to the lowlands, and several minutes later they were followed by three or four more women. After the lapse of several minutes, one of the women ran back through the lane and up the hill, and a few minutes later a man came running down the hill, and then several more men. The crowd, numbering more than a dozen, spent a few minutes along the top of the bank of the Esopus creek at the Schmidt bend, and then disappeared down the sloping side toward the creek.

The person who had noticed the excitement communicated the discovery to several other people, and an interested knot of men and women watched the hurrying to and fro. An investigation was decided on, because if anyone had been drowned help would be necessary, and the spectators at a distance were willing to give it. Efforts to communicate with residents of Manor avenue by telephone were unsuccessful. Nobody responded to the calls, and the residents of that beautiful thoroughfare evidently were at church, or else had joined the excited crowd along the creek.

Finally a small crowd of boys was espied coming from the direction of the bend, and they were questioned. Had they been swimming at the bend? With hair dripping and clothes from which the sand had not yet been brushed, they replied promptly, "No, sir. What! Swim on Sunday? No, sir-ee."

Then the surmise that someone might have been drowned, and the consequent excitement, was explained to the youngsters, who seemed unable to explain the mystery. Finally one boy spoke up. "I guess it's all right," he said. "You see, there's a boy visiting over on Broadway from New York—Little Isadore. He's just learned to swim, and his pa and his ma, and his sisters and some other folks from New York are up visiting here for Sunday. And Little Isadore, you see, told us he was going in to swim so they could all see him in the water, and perhaps that's the crowd you see, mister—all his uncles and his aunts, and his pa and his ma and his sisters and the other folks."

Then the little boys who seemed surprised at the idea of anyone going swimming on Sunday trudged homeward to explain how they came by sand-covered clothes and dripping hair. They were all swimmers, or of swimming age, except one little fellow, who tramped on behind, and he wasn't big enough to appreciate the real purpose of a swim. So when he imparted the information as they traveled that "Little Isadore's family are down watching him take a swim," the little fellow who tramped on behind and didn't understand the purpose of a "swim," echoed:

"Yes, Little Isadore's family's gone down to see him take a bath."

ELLENVILLE.

Where Reform Must Begin.

The adult's habits, opinions and ideals are fixed; eternal truths may be shot at him or thrust into him, but he "holds the same opinion still." But the child's mind is plastic. The impressions it receives it will retain, and if they are economically sound, it will grow into an adult with altruistic principles holding due prominence. So we must start with the child in the home, the child in the street, the child in the school. This is where reform must begin.

Would Be Dangerous.

Almost any man would be sent to the penitentiary or an insane asylum if he admitted as much to his discredit, that wasn't true, as he will admit falsely to his credit.

KINGSTON NOW HAS A POLICEWOMAN

Of Course it is Mrs. M. J. Michael, the Original Suffragette, and Pig Owners Will do Well to Beware.

Kingston now has a full fledged policewoman, the first in the history of the city, by the action of the board of police commissioners at its recent meeting in granting the application of Mrs. M. J. Michael, the only woman member of the board of health, and appointing her one of the twenty-six special police. Mrs. Michael under her new appointment, is allowed the privilege of making an arrest and carrying a gun.

Another appointment was that of Health Officer Stelle as a special policeman. Dr. Stelle is now well armed with authority as he was also recently sworn in as a deputy sheriff. It is expected that Mrs. Michael will also apply for appointment as a deputy sheriff of Ulster county upon her return from the mountains where she is spending her vacation.

The action taken by Dr. Stelle and Mrs. Michael was the outcome of a visit paid to Abram Ellsworth on Lucas turnpike, the man whose pigs have caused the board of health considerable trouble in the past. It will be remembered that Mr. Ellsworth was alleged to have passed some remarks upon what he would do to Dr. Stelle if he caught him in the town of Ulster. One day recently, as told in The Freeman at the time, the members of the "pig committee" of the board of health and Dr. Stelle accompanied some of the members of the town of Ulster board of health to investigate the Ellsworth pigs. Dr. Stelle remembering the threats said to have been made by Mr. Ellsworth, was sworn in as a deputy sheriff before the trip to the Ellsworth farm was made.

Upon the return to Kingston the doctor, Mrs. Michael and Charles L. McBride put in applications to be appointed special police in order that in case of trouble with Mr. Ellsworth or any one else they would have the authority of placing them under arrest. All three applications were granted.

Secretary Kaplan and Sanitary Inspector Quigley also applied for appointments which were also made by the police board at its last meeting.

There is now no question but that the board of health will be able to carry on its work without asking aid of the police force, as practically the most of the members of the board and its officers are now special police with the right to "tote" a gun.

Not His Encore.

A small girl of six seated in the front row of the circus, watched knowingly a dozen and more elephants go silently through their tricks. The dapper little trainer's frequent acknowledgment of the audience's appreciation evidently annoyed the little lady. Unable to further endure his seeming conceit she cried out, "Now man you just keep still. You ain't doin' a thing, so we ain't clappin' you."—National Monthly.

Gladstone's Domestic Rule.

Mr. Gladstone once said that he had solved the domestic problem in this way: "Whenever Mrs. Gladstone insists I submit; and whenever I insist she submits." He didn't say, however, whether they took turns about insisting and submitting. Marriage is a failure when one of the parties insists on being the insister and doesn't take turns in submitting to the submitter.

Watch Your Opals.

The reason why opals are so often lost from their settings is that they expand with heat more than other precious stones, and consequently force open the gold which holds them in place.

Nature's Vivid Coloring.

The grandest phenomenon of nature is the glorious purple and crimson that sometimes spreads over the sky after sunset. Beginning with a splash of salmon hue, the evening purple spreads into the higher regions of the sky and covers the whole heavens with a curtain of deep red, full of mystery. In the mountains one is astonished to see this rose or violet color produce no shadow but bathe the entire landscape.

All Rests on Fate.

During a prolonged study of the lives of various men both great and small, I came upon this thought: "If the web of the world the one may well be regarded as the warp, the other as the woof. It is the little men, after all, who give breadth to the web, and the great men firmness and solidity, perhaps also the addition of some sort of pattern. But the scissors of the fates determine its length and to that all the rest must join in submitting itself."—Goethe.

LITTLE ISADORE WENT SWIMMING

Proud Relatives Went to View His New Accomplishment and the Amalgamated Order of Rubber-necks Got Excited.

Just as the church bells were tolling Sunday evening, someone noticed several women running down the lane extending back of the Dr. P. B. Collier property on Manor avenue to the lowlands, and several minutes later they were followed by three or four more women. After the lapse of several minutes, one of the women ran back through the lane and up the hill, and a few minutes later a man came running down the hill, and then several more men. The crowd, numbering more than a dozen, spent a few minutes along the top of the bank of the Esopus creek at the Schmidt bend, and then disappeared down the sloping side toward the creek.

The person who had noticed the excitement communicated the discovery to several other people, and an interested knot of men and women watched the hurrying to and fro. An investigation was decided on, because if anyone had been drowned help would be necessary, and the spectators at a distance were willing to give it. Efforts to communicate with residents of Manor avenue by telephone were unsuccessful. Nobody responded to the calls, and the residents of that beautiful thoroughfare evidently were at church, or else had joined the excited crowd along the creek.

Finally a small crowd of boys was espied coming from the direction of the bend, and they were questioned. Had they been swimming at the bend? With hair dripping and clothes from which the sand had not yet been brushed, they replied promptly, "No, sir. What! Swim on Sunday? No, sir-ee."

Then the surmise that someone might have been drowned, and the consequent excitement, was explained to the youngsters, who seemed unable to explain the mystery. Finally one boy spoke up. "I guess it's all right," he said. "You see, there's a boy visiting over on Broadway from New York—Little Isadore. He's just learned to swim, and his pa and his ma, and his sisters and some uncles and a couple of aunts and some other folks from New York are up visiting here for Sunday. And Little Isadore, you see, told us he was going in to swim so they could all see him in the water, and perhaps that's the crowd you see, mister—all his uncles and his aunts, and his pa and his ma, and his sisters and the other folks."

Then the little boys who seemed surprised at the idea of anyone going swimming on Sunday trudged homeward to explain how they came by sand-covered clothes and dripping hair. They were all swimmers, or of swimming age, except one little fellow, who tramped on behind, and he wasn't big enough to appreciate the real purpose of a swim. So when the older boys of swimming-age imparted the information as they traveled that "Little Isadore's family are down watching him take a swim," the little fellow who tramped behind and didn't understand the purpose of a "swim," echoed: "Yes, Little Isadore's family's gone down to see him take a bath."

Where Reform Must Begin.

The adult's habits, opinions and ideals are fixed; eternal truths may be shot at him or thrust into him, but he holds the same opinion still. But the child's mind is plastic. The impressions it receives it will retain, and if they are economically sound, it will grow into an adult with altruistic principles holding due prominence. So we must start with the child in the home, the child in the street, the child in the school. This is where reform must begin.

Would Be Dangerous.

Almost any man would be sent to the penitentiary or an insane asylum if he admitted as much to his discredit, that wasn't true, as he will admit false to his credit.

KINGSTON NOW HAS A POLICEWOMAN

Of Course it is Mrs. M. J. Michael, the Original Suffragette, and Pig Owners Will do Well to Beware.

Kingston now has a full fledged policewoman, the first in the history of the city, by the action of the board of police commissioners at its recent meeting in granting the application of Mrs. M. J. Michael, the only woman member of the board of health, and appointing her one of the twenty-six special police. Mrs. Michael under her new appointment, is allowed the privilege of making an arrest and carrying a gun.

Another appointment was that of Health Officer Stelle as a special policeman. Dr. Stelle is now well armed with authority as he was also recently sworn in as a deputy sheriff. It is expected that Mrs. Michael will also apply for appointment as a deputy sheriff of Ulster county upon her return from the mountains where she is spending her vacation.

The action taken by Dr. Stelle and Mrs. Michael was the outcome of a visit paid to Abram Ellsworth on Lucas turnpike, the man whose pigs have caused the board of health considerable trouble in the past. It will be remembered that Mr. Ellsworth was alleged to have passed some remarks upon what he would do to Dr. Stelle if he caught him in the town of Ulster. One day recently, as told in The Freeman at the time, the members of the "pig committee" of the board of health and Dr. Stelle accompanied some of the members of the town of Ulster board of health to investigate the Ellsworth pigs. Dr. Stelle remembering the threats said to have been made by Mr. Ellsworth, was sworn in as a deputy sheriff before the trip to the Ellsworth farm was made.

Upon the return to Kingston the doctor, Mrs. Michael and Charles L. McBride put in applications to be appointed special police in order that in case of trouble with Mr. Ellsworth or any one else they would have the authority of placing them under arrest. All three applications were granted.

Secretary Kaplan and Sanitary Inspector Quigley also applied for appointments which were also made by the police board at its last meeting.

There is now no question but that the board of health will be able to carry on its work without asking aid of the police force, as practically the most of the members of the board and its officers are now special police with the right to "tote" a gun.

Not His Encore.

A small girl of six seated in the front row of the circus, watched knowingly a dozen and more elephants go silently through their tricks.

The dapper little trainer's frequent acknowledgment of the audience's appreciation evidently annoyed the little lady. Unable to further endure his seeming conceit she cried out, "Now man you just keep still. You ain't doin' a thing, so we ain't a clappin' you."—National Monthly.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JULY 13, 1914.

The women of Kansas got the suffrage only two years ago, but they seem to be tired of it already. At least, scarcely any of them are taking the trouble to register so that they can vote at the election next month. A despatch says: "The indifference of the women is worrying the party leaders. They do not know what to make of the matter." It is venturesome to make a diagnosis at such long range, but we venture the assertion that some of the party leaders are not "worrying." Charles F. Murphy of this State is in favor of woman suffrage, being well aware that the wives of his henchmen will flock to the polling places when he needs them. The news from Kansas justifies his sagacity.

A "nation-wide inquiry" into business conditions and prospects has been conducted by the New York Times, which reports that there is general confidence in an early improvement in trade. Reliance is placed upon the unprecedented size of the staple crops, which are now past danger from the weather. It was not necessary to make an expensive inquiry to ascertain this information. Bad times do not last forever, and this season has run pretty nearly its normal length. Fool legislation and asinine administration can only delay, not prevent, the return of good times. The man who is knocked down gets up again, but he does not feel quite the same, and he is not likely to vote for the man who struck the blow.

Manufacturers who are being harassed by inspectors of the State Labor Department will be interested to know that there are two hundred and sixteen of these individuals. In order to make a pretence of earning their salaries and to furnish an excuse for their idleness, they are simply obliged to make nuisances of themselves. Most of them are ludicrously incompetent—a fact which is proved by the preposterous orders they issue. Few of them could get jobs with private employers, but they are good little workers for "Charley" Murphy, and have to be "taken care of" to use the language of a prominent Democratic Senator when appropriations were being discussed in joint legislative committee. The salaries of these inspectors aggregate $392,000 a year, or about $30 a week apiece, and their expenses are doubtless equal to their salaries. This runs up to something like $800,000 a year, and the results are not as good as were obtained with the $164,430 spent for the same purpose during the last year of Republican administration.

STOCK &amp; BONDS.

It is not many years since the spectacle of a big man smoking a little cigarette was considered fully as funny as a luxuriant side-whisker, but sentiment has undergone a change. Official reports from the First, Second and Third districts of Greater New York show that during the last fiscal year there was a decrease of over 22,000,000 in the output of large cigars, while there was an increase of nearly 50,000,000 in the output of little cigars and of nearly 1,000,000,000 in the output of cigarettes. It is reasonable to suppose that these reports are typical of those from other districts. The drift to lighter doses of nicotine is due to the same cause which is booming the consumption of light alcoholic beverages at the expense of the stronger varieties. In short, people are becoming more temperate in their indulgences. It is a good sign. It is far better to be able to regulate one's appetite than to be compelled to put it under lock and key.

To Roosevelt's impudent demand that Whitman publicly denounce Barnes as a "boss," the District Attorney appropriately replies that Barnes never tried to boss him and that consequently he is not in a position to utter any denouncement based on facts known to him. By the way, who did Barnes ever try to boss, and what did he try to make him do? So far as the State Chamberman is concerned, isn't this boss idea a myth? There is no difficulty, however, in citing instances of Roosevelt's activity as a genuine, fished-in-the-wool boss. For years he has tried his best to boss everybody in his vicinity. He settles all questions arbitrarily, without consulting anyone, just as he did with the Pinchot-Perkins dispute. He writes his party platforms and selects the members of his party organization. He says who shall and who shall not be nominated for office on his party ticket and even goes so far as to try to select the candidates of other parties. Satan-rebeking sin is a consistent character compared with Roosevelt rebeking bossism.

THE COST.

(By Our Woman Editor.)
It was the Rev. Dr. Anna Shaw who a while ago made this pointed criticism of the American home and one of its great weaknesses: "Sometimes I think that if our families had one-half of the material good things that take the strength and vitality of the husband to earn the family life would be much better. With the awful struggle to get a living and all the things that the modern family demands, the man has little left of his best self to give to his family. If the family had half of the things and twice as much of the father's association it would be better for the family. There is something splendid in the association of a good father and husband with a growing family. Most families have too little of it."

To the minds of many of us, Dr. Shaw is quite right in her criticism, for when a man strains every nerve to make ends meet and to buy added luxuries all the while, the best of his energies are spent before the home is reached and he lacks the time, mayhap the patience to enjoy the very things for which he is working. It is a drab little tragedy, to be sure, and one that is more or less taken for granted; but if the father, the mother, the children, might fully realize the lasting advantage of making certain to put the emphasis on the most desirable things that life has to offer, and letting the others go by, if need be, surely there would be fewer disappointments and more all-around comfort in living.

In most of harmonious families, it would be a genuine pleasure to have a little more time, a little more money for pleasures together, for side trips now and then, for forbidden luxuries, for small something that must be set aside in order to manage—well, furnishings that are quite pretentious and a great many other things that come pretty high. When we seriously think of it, it is appalling to sacrifice personal, human comradeship and ease of mind to the wear and tear and daily strain that always come through the conscious effort to keep up appearances. It is the strain of it that tells, and in the end, what is gained? Just the cheap satisfaction of pridefully holding up one's head as high as his neighbor's.

And yet that seems to be the one thing that spurs folk along.

It is not too much to say that it is only the few who are courageous enough, unconventional enough, or whatever it is, to follow the ways that yield most in genuine comfort and happiness. There's a popular pace that is set and, in order to follow it, everything else must go by.

There's a farmer not so far away, from whom many of us might learn a wholesome lesson. He dearly loves the soil from which he makes his living and a great many luxuries aside; but he also loves to pack his family into a big comfortable rig and live away for a day or a week at a time. But, as he tells the story, for many years his spreading acres called aloud and in the very season when he most wanted to skip away he thought he was needed the most. And year after year he steadfastly stuck to his post, beginning his labors at the gray deep of dawn and going on until long after the sun sank down in the west. But a season or two ago he thoughtfully communed with himself: After a comfortable day of work, and after a comfortable return for his labors, what was the extra for? He "slaved away," as he put it, with no time to enjoy the very things for which he most craved, and as for companionship with his family, there wasn't any.

That summer, figuratively speaking, he dropped his plow and stole away with his family, stole away to the places where all his life he had wanted to go but which he had missed because he had believed that he must keep perpetually close to the grindstone. And for what? Why, each year he had bought some new luxury that he did not begin to compare, in measure of comfort, with his new-found pleasure of stealing away. It was all a case of relative values and he was glad to say that he had learned, at last, not to spend his life working away for really unessential things, missing all the time the companionship, the peace and enjoyment to be found in the home and in the big outside.

And we? We smile, or something worse, when we speak of immigrants who seek our shores for a working while and then, when they have accumulated a few modest little hundred or so, return to their much-loved Italy or other sunny land and proceed to live simply and to feel that they have wealth enough at command. But mightn't they teach us a lesson? They have enough for their needs, and instead of remaining here wedded to digging or to other hard work, when they are longing for a different kind of life, they slip overseas once again where their families await. And if they have little enough leeway, they are not spending their lives, toiling for things that do not recompense them.

And are they wiser than we?
FRANCES SHAFFER.

Nothing Happened.

Joseph Pennell told a Whistler story in Boston apropos of the famous "Joconde" which was recently returned to the Louvre.

"Whistler, when an art student," said Mr. Pennell, "used to copy celebrated paintings in the Louvre. I found him there one day hard at work on a copy of 'La Joconde'."

"You've done a fine thing there," I remarked, for his copy was a good one.

"Yes," Whistler agreed. "I am pleased with it," and then in his whimsical way, he added:

"I wonder what they'll do with the poor old original now."—Boston Post.

The Two Kinds.

Dr. Talcott Williams, head of the Columbia School of Journalism, said at a recent luncheon:

"The sensational type of newspaper is going out. The exponents of this type used to defend themselves with the assertion that their scandalous articles were a natural response to a natural curiosity."

"But to this a great editor once retorted:

"There are two kinds of curiosity. Into one kind we stick our brains; into the other only our nose."—New York World.

Why He Didn't Tango.

Ramsay Peugnet, secretary of the American Silk Manufacturers' Association, pointed out recently in New York that the tango had enlarged the silk business by 250,000 new looms and spindles.

"The tango, the one-step, the hesitation and the other new dances," Mr. Peugnet said, "have caused (he average woman, who bought only one dinner gown a year in the past, to buy two, three and four new gowns now. Hence, the silk trade's enormous expansion."

"It's a good thing for silk," Mr. Peugnet went on, "that all men aren't like Blanc."

"Blanc sat disconsolately in the smoking room while all the other guests at a ball were tangoing like mad."

"Why Blanc, what are you doing here? Why aren't you out on the floor tangoing, man?" his host asked.

"I don't tango," Blanc answered. "You don't tango? Incredible! How on earth is it that you don't tango?"

"Well," Blanc said sadly, "I'd like to tango, and I would tango, only the music puts me out and the girl gets in my way."—New York World.

Innuendo.

Congressman Eugene E. Reed of New Hampshire told of the reputation of a party named Abner.

Abner was hailed to court to answer to a complaint that grew out of a broken bargain, and among the witnesses called to testify was Hiram Wilkins.

"Mr. Wilkins," said the examining lawyer, "you know the defendant in this case, do you not?"

"Oh, yes," answered Hiram. "Known him high onter 40 years now."

"What is his reputation for veracity?" asked the lawyer. "Is he regarded as a man who never tells the truth?"

"Waal, I can't say that he don't never tell the truth," answered Hiram, "but I do know that if he wanted his hogs ter come ter dinner he'd have ter git somebody else ter call 'em."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

SPEAKER SWEET VICTIM OF APPENDICITIS AND NOT EXPECTED TO LIVE.

Thaddeus C. Sweet.

Albany, N. Y., July 13.—Stricken with appendicitis soon after leaving the capital, where he attended a meeting of the trustees of public buildings, Speaker T. C. Sweet, of the state assembly, was rushed to the hospital and immediately operated upon. The doctors are doubtful about the outcome of the operation.

Speaker Sweet complained of feeling ill, but his first trouble was diagnosed as intestinal disturbances. After leaving the capital on the evening of June 10, he was attached with severe pains.

Mr. Sweet was elected speaker at the last session of the legislature over Assemblyman Harold J. Hinman after a brief deadlock. He has been in the assembly since 1910.

At the Garden Theater.

Grogan & Groves of the Garden Theater, the new open air moving picture place on Broadway, have secured some of the best motion pictures ever produced for presentation at the Garden during the present week and will keep to that high standard the remainder of the season.

Tonight a strong three reel drama, one of the best ever seen on the screen, "A Military Judas," will be given complete, also one of the best comedy photos, "One Round of Golf."—Kings.

Garden is very inviting these warm nights, and big crowds are being entertained in the open air with good movies and excellent music.

Use Magazine Stories.

An invalid or aged person who enjoys magazine articles sometimes finds the magazines, with their bulk of advertising, hard to handle. If the magazines are taken apart by removing the little wire clips that bind the sections together, the stories or articles can be easily handled separately. And any article specially likely to be enjoyed by a friend at a distance can be sent by mail when separated in this way.

Daily Thought.

Man's highest merit always is, as much as possible, to rule external circumstances, and as little as possible to let himself be ruled by them.—Goethe.

Antiquity of Geology.

Authentic evidence has been found which carries geology back, as a human study, as far as the bronze age. Herr O. Merkel claims that he has discovered that fossils were intelligently collected at that remote period of European history. In a cinerary urn of that age, he has found two or three specimens of each of 58 species of fossil shells, with some of the modern Mediterranean shells for comparison.—Independent.

Learn to Forget.

Caesar was so ready to forgive that even Cicero, who was by no means a constant friend to him, relates, as a singular proof of his noble heart, that he never used to forget anything except the wrong done to him. Indeed, to pardon is a most beautiful revenge; but to forget is still more beautiful.—Petrarch.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JULY 13, 1914.

The women of Kansas got the suffrage only two years ago, but they seem to be tired of it already. At least, scarcely any of them are taking the trouble to register so that they can vote at the election next month. A despatch says: "The indifference of the women is worrying the party leaders. They do not know what to make of the matter." It is venturesome to make a diagnosis at such long range, but we venture the assertion that some of the party leaders are not "worrying." Charles F. Murphy of this State is in favor of woman suffrage, being well aware that the wives of his henchmen will flock to the polling places when he needs them. The news from Kansas justifies his sagacity.

A "nation-wide inquiry" into business conditions and prospects has been conducted by the New York Times, which reports that there is general confidence in an early improvement in trade. Reliance is placed upon the unprecedented size of the staple crops, which are now past danger from the weather. It was not necessary to make an expensive inquiry to ascertain this information. Bad times do not last forever, and this season has run pretty nearly its normal length. Fool legislation and asinine administration can only delay, not prevent, the return of good times. The man who is knocked down gets up again, but he does not feel quite the same, and he is not likely to vote for the man who struck the blow.

Manufacturers who are being harassed by inspectors of the State Labor Department will be interested to know that there are two hundred and sixteen of these individuals. In order to make a pretence of earning their salaries and to furnish an excuse for their idleness, they are simply obliged to make nuisances of themselves. Most of them are ludicrously incompetent—a fact which is proved by the preposterous orders they issue. Few of them could get jobs with private employers, but they are good little workers for "Charley" Murphy, and have to be "taken care of," to use the language of a prominent Democratic Senator when appropriations were being discussed in joint legislative committee. The salaries of these inspectors aggregate $392,000 a year, or about $30 a week apiece, and their expenses are doubtless equal to their salaries. This runs up to something like $800,000 a year, and the results are not as good as were obtained with the $164,430 spent for the same purpose during the last year of Republican administration.

It is not many years since the spectacle of a big man smoking a little cigarette was considered fully as funny as luxuriant side-whiskers, but sentiment has undergone a change. Official reports from the First, Second and Third districts of Greater New York show that during the last fiscal year there was a decrease of over 22,000,000 in the output of large cigars, while there was an increase of nearly 59,000,000 in the output of little cigars and of nearly 1,000,000,000 in the output of cigarettes. It is reasonable to suppose that these reports are typical of those from other districts. The drift to lighter doses of nicotine is due to the same cause which is booming the consumption of light alcoholic beverages at the expense of the stronger varieties. In short, people are becoming more temperate in their indulgences. It is a good sign. It is far better to be able to regulate one's appetite than to be compelled to put it under lock and key.

To Roosevelt's impudent demand that Whitman publicly denounce Barnes as a "boss," the District Attorney appropriately replies that Barnes never tried to boss him and that consequently he is not in a position to utter any denouncement based on facts known to him. By the way, who did Barnes ever try to boss, and what did he try to make him do? So far as the State Chairman is concerned, isn't this boss idea a myth? There is no difficulty, however, in citing instances of Roosevelt's activity as a genuine, fixed-in-the-wool boss. For years he has tried his best to boss everybody in his vicinity. He settles all questions arbitrarily, without consulting anyone, just as he did with the Pinchot-Perkins dispute. He writes his party platforms and selects the members of his party organization. He says who shall and who shall not be nominated for office on his party ticket and even goes so far as to try to select the candidates of other parties. Satan-rebeking sin is a consistent character compared with Roosevelt rebeking bossism.

THE COST.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

It was the Rev. Dr. Anna Shaw who a while ago made this pointed criticism of the American home and one of its great weaknesses: "Sometimes I think that if our families had one-half of the material good things that take the strength and vitality of the husband to earn the family life would be much better. With the awful struggle to get a living and all the things that the modern family demands, the man has little left of his best self to give to his family. If the family had half of the things and twice as much of the father's association it would be better for the family. There is something splendid in the association of a good father and husband with a growing family. Most families have too little of it."

To the minds of many of us, Dr. Shaw is quite right in her criticism, for when a man strains every nerve to make ends meet and to buy added luxuries all the while, the best of his energies are spent before the home is reached and he lacks the time, mayhap the patience to enjoy the very things for which he is working. It is a drab little tragedy, to be sure, and one that is more or less taken for granted; but if the father, the mother, the children, might fully realize the lasting advantage of making certain to put the emphasis on the most desirable things that life has to offer, and letting the others go by, if need be, surely there would be fewer disappointments and more all-around comfort in living.

In most of harmonious families, it would be a genuine pleasure to have a little more time, a little more money for pleasures together, for side trips now and then, for forbidden luxuries, for small things that must be set aside in order to manage—well, furnishings that are quite pretentious and a great many other things that come pretty high. When we seriously think of it, it is appalling to sacrifice personal, human comradeship and ease of mind to the wear and tear and daily strain that always come through the conscious effort to keep up appearances. It is the strain of it that tells, and in the end, what is gained? Just the cheap satisfaction of pridefully holding up one's head as high as his neighbor's.

And yet that seems to be the one thing that spurs folk along.

It is not too much to say that it is only the few who are courageous enough, unconventional enough, or whatever it is, to follow the ways that yield most in genuine comfort and happiness. There's a popular pace that is set and, in order to follow it, everything else must go by.

There's a farmer not so far away from whom many of us might learn a wholesome lesson. He dearly loves the soil from which he makes his living and a great many luxuries aside; but he also loves to pack his family into a big comfortable rig and his way for a day or a week at a time. But, as he tells the story, for many years his spreading acres called aloud and in the very season when he most wanted to skip away he thought he was needed the most. And year after year he steadfastly stuck to his post, beginning his labors at the gray deep of dawn and going on until long after the sun sank down in the west. But a season or two ago he thoughtfully communed with himself: After a comfortable day of work, and after a comfortable return for his labors, what was the extra for? He "slaved away," as he put it, with no time to enjoy the very things for which he most craved, and as for companionship with his family, there wasn't any.

That summer, figuratively speaking, he dropped his plow and stole away with his family, stole away to the places where all his life he had wanted to go but which he had missed because he had believed that he must keep perpetually close to the grindstone. And for what? Why, each year he had bought some new luxury that he did not begin to compare, in measure of comfort, with his new-found pleasure of stealing away. It was all a case of relative values and he was glad to say that he had learned, at last, not to spend his life working away for really unessential things, missing all the time the companionship, the peace and enjoyment to be found in the home and in the big outside.

And we?

We smile, or something worse, when we speak of immigrants who seek our shores for a working while and then, when they have accumulated a few modest little hundred or so, return to their much-loved Italy or other sunny land and proceed to live simply and to feel that they have wealth enough at command. But mightn't they teach us a lesson? They have enough for their needs, and instead of remaining here wedded to digging or to other hard work, when they are longing for a different kind of life, they slip overseas once again where their families await. And if they have little enough leeway, they are not spending their lives, toiling for things that do not recompense them.

And are they wiser than we?
FRANCES SHAFFER.

Authentic evidence has been found which carries geology back, as a human study, as far as the bronze age. Herr O. Merkel claims that he has discovered that fossils were intelligently collected at that remote period of European history. In a cinerary urn of that age, he has found two or three specimens of each of 58 species of fossil shells, with some of the modern Mediterranean shells for comparison.—Independent.

Learn to Forget.

Caesar was so ready to forgive that even Cicero, who was by no means a constant friend to him, relates, as a singular proof of his noble heart, that he never used to forget anything except the wrong done to him. Indeed, to pardon is a most beautiful revenge; but to forget is still more beautiful.—Petrarch.

REVENUE CUTTER SERVICE.

How It Came to Be Placed Under the Treasury Department.

The United States revenue cutter service is a military arm of the government attached to and under the direction of the treasury department. The service was organized in 1790 and constituted the original naval force of the country. There was at that time no navy department, and the service was placed under the treasury department, where it has remained ever since.

It is charged with the enforcement of the navigation and customs laws of the United States, the assistance of vessels in distress, the protection of the sealing industry in Alaska, the enforcement of the quarantine laws, the destruction of derelicts and other floating dangers to navigation and numerous other duties appropriate to its class of vessels. Each winter, by direction of the president, a number of the cutters patrol the coast for the special purpose of assisting vessels in distress.

The service co-operates with the navy when directed by the president and has so co-operated in every war in which the United States has been engaged. It is sometimes called the revenue marine service, but revenue cutter service is the proper name. There are forty-three cutters in the service, and they carry from one to five or six guns each.—Philadelphia Press.

HYGIENE IN THE DESERT.

Our Latter Day Methods Were an Open Book to Moses.

Nothing under the sun is new. Facts have proved that even the pitch which hygiene has reached at the present day was equalled and in many instances excelled under the laws of Moses.

The particular and careful manner in which animals are slaughtered according to the laws of the Talmud is acknowledged today to be the most sanitary method possible.

Professor Koch gave to the world the valuable results of his investigations in bacteriology, but several thousand years before that the Mosaic law pointed out the danger to humanity from tuberculosis in cattle, but did not forbid poultry as food. It was not many years ago that specialists discovered that fowl tuberculosis was harmless to man.

The yearly exodus to the country and seashore is no new innovation. Moses, the great lawgiver, prescribed not only feasting at certain seasons of the year, but the removal of whole families to great camping grounds in the open spaces, where they could live near to nature.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Chinaman on the Opium Habit. In the American Magazine appears an article entitled "A Modern Opium Eater," written by a newspaper man, who became a victim of the habit and is now a convict in a penitentiary. In the course of the article the author quotes as follows what a Chinese den keeper said to him about the power of the habit to hold its victims:

"You no quit. Every man alltime say he quit. Every man alltime say you. Smoke one time, smoke two time, smoke lee time, then smoke alltime. Chinaman, white man, chokquay (negro) alltime. No can quit. Bimeby you die you quit. Bimeby maybe you bloke—no more money, no more flend bollow money, no can steal money, maybe you quit one, two days. Bimeby maybe you go jail, no got flend bling you hop, no got money givem policeman catchem hop, you quit. You got money, no go jail, you no quit. I heap sabe. Bimeby you see."

The Facile Mexican. In the opening paragraph of one of his best stories Kipling wrote: "Let it be clearly understood that the Russian is a delightful person till he tucks his shirt in. As an oriental he is charming. It is only when he insists on being treated as the most easterly of western peoples that he becomes a radical anomaly, extremely difficult to handle. The host never knows which side of his nature is going to turn up next." There is a somewhat similar difficulty with the Mexican. He can be charming, but one never knows whether he is the most northern southerner or the most southern northerner, and he can change from one to the other with a facility that is almost genius.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Studied It Out. One day two farm laborers were discussing the wisdom of the present generation. Said the first:

"We be wiser than our fathers was, and they were wiser than their fathers was."

The second one, after pondering a while and gazing at his companion, replied:

"Well, Garge, what a fule thy grand-father must 'a' been!"—London Express.

Civilization. It is the triumph of civilization that at last communities have obtained such a mastery over natural laws that they drive and control them. The winds, the water, electricity, all aliens that in their wild form were dangerous, are now controlled by human will, and are made useful servants.—Henry Ward Beecher.

It is charged with the enforcement of the navigation and customs laws of the United States, the assistance of vessels in distress, the protection of the sealing industry in Alaska, the enforcement of the quarantine laws, the destruction of derelicts and other floating dangers to navigation and numerous other duties appropriate to its class of vessels. Each winter, by direction of the president, a number of the cutters patrol the coast for the special purpose of assisting vessels in distress.

The service co-operates with the navy when directed by the president and has so co-operated in every war in which the United States has been engaged. It is sometimes called the revenue marine service, but revenue cutter service is the proper name. There are forty-three cutters in the service, and they carry from one to five or six guns each.—Philadelphia Press.

HYGIENE IN THE DESERT.

Our Latter Day Methods Were an Open Book to Moses.

Nothing under the sun is new. Facts have proved that even the pitch which hygiene has reached at the present day was equalled and in many instances excelled under the laws of Moses.

The particular and careful manner in which animals are slaughtered according to the laws of the Talmud is acknowledged today to be the most sanitary method possible.

Professor Koch gave to the world the valuable results of his investigations in bacteriology, but several thousand years before that the Mosaic law pointed out the danger to humanity from tuberculosis in cattle, but did not forbid poultry as food. It was not many years ago that specialists discovered that fowl tuberculosis was harmless to man.

The yearly exodus to the country and seaside is no new innovation. Moses, the great lawgiver, prescribed not only feasting at certain seasons of the year, but the removal of whole families to great camping grounds in the open spaces, where they could live near to nature.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Chinaman on the Opium Habit.

In the American Magazine appears an article entitled "A Modern Opium Eater," written by a newspaper man, who became a victim of the habit and is now a convict in a penitentiary. In the course of the article the author quotes as follows what a Chinese den keeper said to him about the power of the habit to hold its victims:

"You no quit. Every man alleetime say he quit. Every man alleetime you. Smoke one time, smoke two time, smoke three time, then smoke alleetime. Chinaman, white man, chokquay (negro) alleesame. No can quit. Bimeby you die you quit. Bimeby maybe you bloke—no more money. no more fiend bellow money, no can stealem money, maybe you quit one, two days. Bimeby maybe you go jail, no got fiend bling you hop, no got money given policeman catchem hop, you quit. You got money, no go jail, you no quit. I heap sabe. Bimeby you see."

The Facile Mexican.

In the opening paragraph of one of his best stories Kipling wrote: "Let it be clearly understood that the Russian is a delightful person till he tucks his shirt in. As an oriental he is charming. It is only when he insists on being treated as the most easterly of western peoples that he becomes a radical anomaly, extremely difficult to handle. The host never knows which side of his nature is going to turn up next." There is a somewhat similar difficulty with the Mexican. He can be charming, but one never knows whether he is the most northern southerner or the most southern northerner, and he can change from one to the other with a facility that is almost genius.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Studied it Out.

One day two farm laborers were discussing the wisdom of the present generation. Said the first:

"We be wiser than our fathers was, and they were wiser than their fathers was."

The second one, after pondering a while and gazing at his companion, replied:

"Well, Garge, what a fule thy grandfather must 'a' been!"—London Express.

Civilization.

It is the triumph of civilization that at last communities have obtained such a mastery over natural laws that they drive and control them. The winds, the water, electricity, all aliens that in their wild form were dangerous, are now controlled by human will, and are made useful servants.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Which?

Is woman more interesting than man, or the reverse? Man varies more. He has more genius in exceptional individuals, and less of genius-like insight in the average person. He competes; woman endures. THE NATIONAL GRANGE Conducted by Charles M. Gardner, Editor of the National Grange, Westfield, Mass.

COMPLETE POSTAL EXPRESS

Extension of the Postal Service Must Soon Be Worked Out in a Logical Way.

The Grange as an organization is squarely on record in behalf of a system of complete postal express, to follow as an extension to the parcel post service already secured, to be worked out in a logical way as fast as possible. How strongly the Grange stands in this matter, and how vigorously it intends to push it, is well expressed in the address which State Master C. B. Kegley gave to the annual session of the Washington State Grange which has just closed. Mr. Kegley presents the Pacific Coast view, but it is the Atlantic Coast view as well, and constitutes the platform on which the Grange members of the country very clearly stand. Mr. Kegley said in part:

"The Grange demand for parcel post improvement will not be satisfied until we have established a postal express service reaching all rural districts as well as the cities, as full and complete as that now enjoyed by the cities by the double service of the limited parcel post and the private express companies. We have given our support to the administration in the improvements made, and have been satisfied with them because we have firmly believed they were steps in a well-considered plan of developing a complete service in accordance with the farmers' desires. If this confidence is justified, the time has now arrived when we have the right to expect a further increase in the weight limit on the short hauls to 100 pounds, and on long hauls to 50 pounds. I do not think that making this test at this time can be considered unreasonable, for the postmaster general and the chairman of the interstate commerce commission have officially testified that the weight limit ought to be at least 100 pounds and the general understanding has been that such an increase was contemplated as soon as the department had adjusted itself to handling the heavier weights. But since then powerful interests have organized to oppose the extension of the parcel post beyond the present limits.

"To get the merchants of the big cities to support this plan the express companies are to give them the service that is to be denied to the rural districts. In return, these merchants and the merchants' associations of the big cities, are to refuse any support for parcel post extension and bring all their influence to bear on the postal administration and congress to prevent it. This movement has already resulted in two attempts at legislation by congress, and I have myself heard it boasted that the department will not oppose the plans of such a powerful combination. I sincerely hope that there is no justification for such claims, but it is significant, to say the least, that merchants and merchants' associations, on whose support we confidently counted, have ceased to co-operate, claiming that the parcel post work is completed, and are now supporting the non-extension policy.

"The whole animus to this opposition is cold-blooded indifference to the farmer's needs for an improved service and determination to ride roughshod over his right. Will it prevail? Most assuredly it will unless the farmers themselves see to it that their interests are properly looked after. This we propose to do by reorganization of the postal express federation and keeping Brother Hampton on the job at Washington until all danger is past and the extension work has gone so far that its completion is certain. The simple plan by which this is to be accomplished will be presented to you at the proper time and I bespeak for it the most careful consideration."

SPEAK PLAIN LANGUAGE.

The Grange members of Pennsylvania do not hesitate to express their honest convictions, no matter who may get hit by the speaking. No doubt the object of the resolution quoted below did not enjoy reading it, but this did not deter the patrons from frank expression just the same. This was a resolution heartily passed by a big meeting of one of the largest Pennsylvania Granges in the state of Pennsylvania:

"The Tioga County Pomona Grange, No. 30, representing nearly 5,000 members, adopted some stirring resolutions at their last meeting, among them one opposing the re-election of Boies Penrose to the United States senate. Some of Penrose's friends pretend to be shocked, because the Grange is not a political body. The Grangers say that their objections to Penrose are based on the widespread belief that he is a firm friend, aid and abettor of the cause of whisky, and believing that no other course was open to them, the Grange also disposed of the whisky-Gibboney plan to pay the saloonkeepers of the state $300,000,000 in case public sentiment forces them out of business in the following words: "We assert that in blood and treasure the people of this commonwealth have already paid a too heavy tribute to that cursed tyrant."

HOW TO PREVENT DISEASES OF POULTRY

Fine Specimen of a Healthy Chicken.

Many of the diseases which affect poultry and which spread rapidly throughout the flock, and kill a large part of the birds may be prevented and cured if proper measures are taken in time. The fowls also may be infected by various kinds of parasites, some of which live on the surface of the body and others in the crop, stomach, or intestines. These parasites are injurious because they take a part of the nourishment which should be used by the bird to put on flesh or to produce eggs, says the United States department of agriculture's Farmers' Bulletin 530.

The contagious diseases which are caused by animal and vegetable germs, and the weakness and loss of flesh caused by the larger parasites, are the most important conditions which the poultryman has to consider in the endeavor to keep his birds in a healthy condition. These germs and parasites should be kept out of the flock by suitable preventive measures, because disease may be avoided in this way much more easily and cheaply than it can be cured. The aim in studying the diseases of birds is, therefore, to learn how to prevent such diseases rather than how to cure them.

There are some cases in which medicines may be advantageously given or applied to fowls, but as a rule when a disease is once established it is best to kill it, because the cost of the medicine and the value of the time required to carry out the treatment are usually greater than the value of the birds that are cured.

It is very important to start right and begin the flock with birds which are free from contagion and parasites, and to put such birds upon ground which is likewise free from these causes of disease.

The best way to accomplish this is to get eggs from a flock which has shown no indications of contagious disease for at least a year; avoid putting these eggs in any packing such as chaff, oats, or cut straw which may be musty or moldy; wipe the eggs with a cloth wetted in 79 to 80 per cent alcohol, and match them in a new or thoroughly cleaned incubator. The young chicks should be free from parasites and injurious germs of all kinds, and, to keep them in this condition, they should be put in new or clean brooders and permitted to run only upon ground where poultry has not previously been kept, or which has not been used for poultry for several years.

If the eggs must be hatched under hens instead of in the incubator, the problem of starting a clean flock is much more difficult. Hens are liable to harbor parasitic worms in their intestines and to scatter the eggs of these worms with their manure wherever they go. They generally have lice and mites hidden in their feathers, which pass to the young chicks immediately after the latter are hatched; and they may be the carriers of disease germs even when they appear perfectly healthy.

The hens selected for hatching should be well dusted with a good lice powder, such as is described later, before they are given a setting of eggs; their nests should be perfectly clean and should be made with fresh, soft hay or straw; and there should be a box of road dust, or sifted hard-coal ashes or similar substance, under cover, where they can dust themselves whenever they come from the nest.

Disinfectants and Their Application. Good disinfectants destroy the germs of contagious diseases, the external parasites such as lice and mites, and the embryo of the intestinal worms. They should be thoroughly applied to the interior of poultry houses, worked into all the cracks and crevices, spread over the ceiling and the floor, the roosts, dropping boards, and nest boxes. At the same time, the feeding and drinking troughs should be disinfected by pouring boiling water into them and afterwards drying them in the sun. The disinfectants are most easily applied to the walls and ceilings with a spray pump or brush. As it is difficult to keep them from coming into contact with the face and hands, the more harmless of these mixtures should generally be used. Ordinary lime wash made from freshly slaked lime is excellent and its properties are well known to all. In the case of an actual outbreak of virulent disease, it is well to add to the lime wash six ounces of crude carbolic acid to each gallon, to increase its activity as a disinfectant.

The kerosene emulsion which is frequently used to destroy lice and mites may readily be converted into a disinfectant. To make the emulsion shave half a pound of hard laundry soap into half a gallon of soft water and boil the mixture until all of the soap is dissolved, then remove it to a safe distance from the fire and stir into it, at once, while still hot, two gallons of kerosene oil. This makes a thick, creamy emulsion, or stock mixture. When it is to be used for killing lice in the house one part of this emulsion is mixed with ten parts of water. When it is to be used as a disinfectant add one quart of emulsion to ten quarts of water and stir well; then add one pint of crude carbolic acid or crude cresol, and again stir until all is well mixed.

Very good lime powder may be made at little cost by mixing fine road dust, two quarts, and tobacco dust, one pint. In place of road dust, anthracite coal ashes well sifted may be used, and Persian insect powder or flowers of sulphur may be substituted for the tobacco dust. The important point is that all the ingredients should be in the form of a very fine dust.

Cholera and Cholera-Like Diseases. There are several diseases which have been investigated and described as different because the bacteria which cause them differ in some of their characteristics. The symptoms and the changes which are seen after death are so nearly identical that it is only by studying the bacteria that any one of these diseases can be distinguished from the others. The treatment applicable to the one is equally applicable to the others.

Treatment.

The best method of treatment is to kill the sick fowl in such a way as not to spread the infection with their blood, burn or deeply bury their bodies, and separate the remaining birds into small lots of three to five each, so that when a bird is attacked there will not be more than this number exposed to it. Then watch each lot so as to remove any sick bird as soon as symptoms appear. Disinfectants should be used in the houses and yards where the disease first appeared, and also in the small pens in which the separate birds are kept.

Roup or Contagious Catarrh. The disease called "roup" by poultrymen is a contagious catarrh, closely resembling the more malignant forms of influenza in the larger animals and in man. It attacks principally the membrane lining the eye, the sacs below the eye (infra-orbital sinuses), the nostrils, the larynx, and the trachea. It is attended with high fever and is very contagious.

Treatment.

The medical treatment of this disease may be very successful if applied. The sick birds should be removed from the flock and put in a warm, dry, and well-ventilated room which is free from drafts of air. The affected mucous membranes should then be treated by applying antiseptic and healing mixtures. The best method is to use a good spraying apparatus, but, lacking this, a small syringe, an oil can, or even a medicine dropper can be made to answer the purpose.

It has been recommended that the bird's head be plunged into a basin or bowl of the mixture and held there a few seconds, but not long enough to cause suffocation.

HOW TO MAKE HOME-MADE SCENTS.

Lavender Water.—Put into a bottle and shake well one-eighth of a pint of spirits of wine, one-eighth of an ounce of oil of lavender and a quarter of a dram of essence of ambergris.

Eau de Cologne.—Half an ounce each of oils of lemon and bergamot, sixteenth of an ounce of oil of orange peel, quarter of a dram of oil of rosemary, twenty drops of oil of neroli, five drops of essence of musk or ambergris. Reduce this amount of ingredients in half a pint of rectified spirits of wine.

Numerous perfumes may be made by adding to a small quantity of rectified spirits of wine oils of geranium, sandalwood, rosemary or essence of bergamot, musk or ambergris, adding it drop by drop until the desired perfume is obtained. These ingredients may be obtained from any drug store.

AMUSE THE KIDDIES.

How to Play the "Cut-out" Game With the Youngsters.

Mothers are often at their wits' end to know what to do with convalescing children. During this trying time it takes much ingenuity to keep them interested.

One of the most pleasurable things to boy and girl alike is the cut-out game. It is as old as the hills and yet has kept its newness and interest to this day. The boy will scorn the ordinary cut-out play, but give him first a blank book, then a catalogue from a sporting firm, a pair of scissors and a bottle of glue and tell him to furnish you a summer camp in the Adirondacks, such as he would like to live in; then suggest that he fix up a scene in Canada in the winter time, with skiing, skating, and so on.

The way to interest the little chap is to excite his imagination first. Describe to him in detail the interior, then the exterior, of a camp in the woods; then tell him to cut out from the catalogue all the pictures which have anything to do with tent life. These include guns, fishing rods, boats, cooking utensils, cots, etc. Clothing for summer camping will probably be illustrated by pictures of men or women dressed in these garments. These figures may be grouped round a fire or standing in a canoe or climbing the mountains.

When the child has a number of illustrations cut out let him use his ingenuity to furnish the scene. Much can be done if the mother can draw a bit. In such a case she could outline on the first page the inside of a bare tent, to be furnished by the child. On the second page could be the outside of the tent, with the mountain in the background and a lake at one side.

Further interest can be added to this game by giving the little one a set of crayons with which to color the pictured scenes. Water colors are a joy to children if they can be arranged in such a way that the water will not spill. An excellent way to do this is to give the child a sewing board. Where the board is cut out in a curve it will fit into the body, and the paints may be placed on its flat surface with no danger of upsetting them.

The wise mother saves her old magazines and catalogues for the time when her children may need them.

HANDY ABOUT THE HOUSE.

How to Use Adhesive Plaster in Unusual Ways.

Adhesive plaster is useful in many ways, but often we never think of it except for covering cuts or holding bandages in place. Here are some of the "unusual uses" to which it may be put: If a new shoe chafes at the heel put a piece of adhesive plaster at the top of the heel stiffening and be comfortable. It will save the hosiery if applied on the outside of the stocking when the hole first begins to make itself apparent. Use it to mend corsets and put it over the ends of protruding steel and bones. A strip around a jelly glass cover will make it airtight. Tiny strips put under the bottom of a rattan chair will save a repair bill. Put a strip into the backs of children's overshoes and they may then be put on without trouble and without a shoe horn, which sometimes tears the rubber. When rugs curl up at the corner strips of the adhesive plaster will cause them to lie flat. If you lose your thumb put a strip on the end of your finger. Use it to make secure your packages. If warm when applied it is sure to stick, no matter how much hard usage the package may have in transit.

WORTH KNOWING.

How to Preserve Fine China From Being Destroyed.

A housewife with an eye to preserving her dishes from destruction has devised a simple bumper to put about the faucet, so that dishes coming in contact with it in the sink will be uninjured. She took a heel from an old rubber boot, cut a hole of the proper size in it with a chisel and hammer and put it around the end of the faucet, and now dishes and delicate glass tumblers can be knocked against it with perfect impunity. Winding a piece of rubber from an old rubber shoe around the faucet and trying it there would be just as effective.

Which?

Is woman more interesting than man, or the reverse? Man varies more. He has more genius in exceptional individuals, and less of genius-like insight in the average person. He competes; woman endures. He builds externally, she at home. He fights; she preserves. Our worthless opinion is that men are more interesting than women, but that woman is more interesting than man.—Harper's Weekly.

THE NATIONAL GRANGE

Conducted by Charles M. Gardner, Editor of the National Grange, Westfield, Mass.

COMPLETE POSTAL EXPRESS

Extension of the Postal Service Must Soon Be Worked Out in a Logical Way.

The Grange as an organization is squarely on record in behalf of a system of complete postal express, to follow as an extension to the parcel post service already secured, to be worked out in a logical way as fast as possible. How strongly the Grange stands in this matter, and how vigorously it intends to push it, is well expressed in the address which State Master C. B. Kagle gave to the annual session of the Washington State Grange which has just closed. Mr. Kagle presents the Pacific Coast view, but it is the Atlantic Coast view as well, and constitutes the platform on which the Grange members of the country very clearly stand. Mr. Kagle said in part:

"The Grange demand for parcel post improvement will not be satisfied until we have established a postal express service reaching all rural districts as well as the cities, as full and complete as that now enjoyed by the cities by the double service of the limited parcel post and the private express companies. We have given our support to the administration in the improvements made, and have been satisfied with them because we have firmly believed they were steps in a well-considered plan of developing a complete service in accordance with the farmers' desires. If this confidence is justified, the time has now arrived when we have the right to expect a further increase in the weight limit on the short hauls to 100 pounds, and on long hauls to 50 pounds. I do not think that making this test at this time can be considered unreasonable, for the postmaster general and the chairman of the interstate commerce commission have officially testified that the weight limit ought to be at least 100 pounds and the general understanding has been that such an increase was contemplated as soon as the department had adjusted itself to handling the heavier weights. But since then powerful interests have organized to oppose the extension of the parcel post beyond the present limits.

"To get the merchants of the big cities to support this plan the express companies are to give them the service that is to be denied to the rural districts. In return, these merchants and the merchants' associations of the big cities, are to refuse any support for parcel post extension and bring all their influence to bear on the postal administration and congress to prevent its extension."

This movement has already resulted in two attempts at legislation by congress, and I have myself heard it boasted that the department will not oppose the plans of such a powerful combination. I sincerely hope that there is no justification for such claims, but it is significant, to say the least, that merchants and merchants' associations, on whose support we confidently counted, have ceased to co-operate, claiming that the parcel post work is completed, and are now supporting the non-extension policy.

"The whole animus to this opposition is cold-blooded indifference to the farmer's needs for an improved service and determination to ride roughshod over his right. Will it prevail? Most assuredly it will unless the farmers themselves see to it that their interests are properly looked after. This we propose to do by reorganization of the postal express federation and keeping Brother Hampton on the job at Washington until all danger is past and the extension work has gone so far that its completion is certain. The simple plan by which this is to be accomplished will be presented to you at the proper time and I bespeak for it the most careful consideration."

SPEAK PLAIN LANGUAGE.

The Grange members of Pennsylvania do not hesitate to express their honest convictions, no matter who may get hit by the speaking. No doubt the object of the resolution quoted below did not enjoy reading it, but this did not deter the patrons from frank expression just the same. This was a resolution heartily passed by a big meeting of one of the largest Pomona Granges in the state of Pennsylvania:

"The Tioga County Pomona Grange, No. 30, representing nearly 5,000 members, adopted some stirring resolutions at their last meeting, among them one opposing the re-election of Boies Penrose to the United States senate. Some of Penrose's friends pretend to be shocked, because the Grange is not a political body. The Grangers say that their objections to Penrose are based on the widespread belief that he is a firm friend, aid and abettor of the cause of whisky, and believing that no other course was open to them, the Grange also disposed of the whisky-Gibboney plan to pay the saloonkeepers of the state $300,000,000 in case public sentiment forces them out of business in the following words:

"We assert that in blood and treasure the people of this commonwealth have already paid a too heavy tribute to that cursed tyrant."

HOW TO PREVENT DISEASES OF POULTRY

Fine Specimen of a Healthy Chicken.

Many of the diseases which affect poultry and which spread rapidly throughout the flock, and kill a large part of the birds may be prevented and cured if proper measures are taken in time. The fowls also may be infested by various kinds of parasites, some of which live on the surface of the body and others in the crop, stomach, or intestines. These parasites are injurious because they take a part of the nourishment which should be used by the bird to put on flesh or to produce eggs, says the United States Department of Agriculture's Farmers' Bulletin 530.

The contagious diseases which are caused by animal and vegetable germs, and the weakness and loss of flesh caused by the larger parasites, are the most important conditions which the poultryman has to consider in the endeavor to keep his birds in a healthy condition. These germs and parasites should be kept out of the flock by suitable preventive measures, because disease may be avoided in this way much more easily and cheaply than it can be cured. The aim in studying the diseases of birds is, therefore, to learn how to prevent such diseases rather than how to cure them.

There are some cases in which medicines may be advantageously given or applied to fowls, but as a rule when a disease is once established it is best to kill it, because the cost of the medicine and the value of the time required to carry out the treatment are usually greater than the value of the birds that are cured.

It is very important to start right and begin the flock with birds which are free from contagion and parasites, and to put such birds upon ground which is likewise free from these causes of disease.

The best way to accomplish this is to get eggs from a flock which has shown no indications of contagious disease for at least a year; avoid putting these eggs in any packing such as straw, or cut straw which may be musty or moldy; wipe the eggs with a cloth wetted in 75 to 90 per cent alcohol, and match them in a new or thoroughly cleaned incubator. The young chicks should be free from parasites and injurious germs of all kinds, and, to keep them in this condition, they should be put in new or clean brooders and permitted to run only upon ground where poultry has not previously been kept, or which has not been used for poultry for several years.

If the eggs must be hatched under hens instead of in the incubator, the problem of starting a clean flock is much more difficult. Hens are liable to harbor parasitic worms in their intestines and to scatter the eggs of these worms with their manure wherever they go. They generally have lice and mites hidden in their feathers, which pass to the young chicks immediately after the latter are hatched; and they may be the carriers of disease germs even when they appear perfectly healthy.

The hens selected for hatching should be well dusted with a good lice powder, such as is described later, before they are given a setting of eggs; their nests should be perfectly clean and should be made with fresh, soft hay or straw; and there should be a box of road dust, or sifted hard-coal ashes or similar substance, under cover, where they can dust themselves whenever they come from the nest.

Good disinfectants destroy the germs of contagious diseases, the external parasites such as lice and mites, and the embryo of the intestinal worms. They should be thoroughly applied to the interior of poultry houses, worked into all the cracks and crevices, spread over the ceiling and the floor, the roosts, dropping boards, and nest boxes. At the same time, the feeding and drinking troughs should be disinfected by pouring boiling water into them and afterwards drying them in the sun. The disinfectants are most easily applied to the walls and ceilings with a spray pump or brush. As it is difficult to keep them from coming into contact with the face and hands, the more harmless of these mixtures should generally be used. Ordinary lime wash made from freshly slaked lime is excellent and its properties are well known to all. In the case of an actual outbreak of virulent disease, it is well to add to the lime wash six ounces of crude carbolic acid to each gallon, to increase its activity as a disinfectant.

The kerosene emulsion which is frequently used to destroy lice and mites may readily be converted into a disinfectant. To make the emulsion shave half a pound of hard laundry soap into half a gallon of soft water and boil the mixture until all of the soap is dissolved, then remove it to a safe distance from the fire and stir into it, at once, while still hot, two gallons of kerosene oil. This makes a thick, creamy emulsion, or stock mixture. When it is to be used for killing lice in the house one part of this emulsion is mixed with ten parts of water. When it is to be used as a disinfectant add one quart of emulsion to ten quarts of water and stir well; then add one pint of crude carbolic acid or crude cresol, and again stir until all is well mixed.

Very good lice powder may be made at little cost by mixing fine road dust, two quarts, and tobacco dust, one pint. In place of road dust, anthracite coal ashes well sifted may be used, and Persian insect powder or flowers of sulphur may be substituted for the tobacco dust. The important point is that all the ingredients should be in the form of a very fine dust.

Cholera and Cholera-Like Diseases. There are several diseases which have been investigated and described as different because the bacteria which cause them differ in some of their characteristics. The symptoms and the changes which are seen after death are so nearly identical that it is only by studying the bacteria that any one of these diseases can be distinguished from the others. The treatment applicable to one is equally applicable to the others.

Treatment. The best method of treatment is to kill the sick fowl in such a way as not to spread the infection with their blood, burn or deeply bury their bodies, and separate the remaining birds into small lots of three to five each, so that when a bird is attacked there will not be more than this number exposed to it. Then watch each lot so as to remove any sick bird as soon as symptoms appear. Disinfectants should be used in the houses and yards where the disease first appeared, and also in the small pens in which the separate birds are kept.

Roup or Contagious Catarrh. The disease called "roup" by poultrymen is a contagious catarrh, closely resembling the more malignant forms of influenza in the larger animals and in man. It attacks principally the membrane lining the eye, the sacs below the eye (infra-orbital sinuses), the nostrils, the larynx, and the trachea. It is attended with high fever and is very contagious.

Treatment. The medical treatment of this disease may be very successful if applied. The sick birds should be removed from the flock and put in a warm, dry, and well-ventilated room which is free from drafts of air. The affected mucous membranes should then be treated by applying antiseptic and healing mixtures. The best method is to use a good spraying apparatus; but, lacking this, a small syringe, an oil can, or even a medicine dropper can be made to answer the purpose.

It has been recommended that the bird's head be plunged into a basin or bowl of the mixture and held there a few seconds, but not long enough to cause suffocation.

WORTH KNOWING.

How to Preserve Fine China From Being Destroyed.

A housewife with an eye to preserving her dishes from destruction has devised a simple bumper to put about the faucet, so that dishes coming in contact with it in the sink will be uninjured.

She took a heel from an old rubber boot, cut a hole of the proper size in it with a chisel and hammer and put it around the end of the faucet, and now dishes and delicate glass tumblers can be knocked against it with perfect impunity. Winding a piece of rubber from an old rubber shoe around the faucet and tying it there would be just as effective.

Happiness.

I have lived to know that the secret of happiness is never to allow your energies to stagnate.—Adam Clark.

you a summer camp in the Adirondacks, such as he would like to live in; then suggest that he fix up a scene in Canada in the winter time, with skiing, skating, and so on.

The way to interest the little chap is to excite his imagination first. Describe to him in detail the interior, then the exterior, of a camp in the woods; then tell him to cut out from the catalogue all the pictures which have anything to do with tent life. These include guns, fishing rods, boats, cooking utensils, cots, etc. Clothing for summer camping will probably be illustrated by pictures of men or women dressed in these garments. These figures may be grouped round a fire or standing in a canoe or climbing the mountains.

When the child has a number of illustrations cut out let him use his ingenuity to furnish the scene. Much can be done if the mother can draw a bit. In such a case she could outline on the first page the inside of a bare tent, to be furnished by the child. On the second page could be the outside of the tent, with the mountain in the background and a lake at one side.

Further interest can be added to this game by giving the little one a set of crayons with which to color the pictured scenes. Water colors are a joy to children if they can be arranged in such a way that the water will not spill. An excellent way to do this is to give the child a sewing board. Where the board is cut out in a curve it will fit into the body, and the paints may be placed on its flat surface with no danger of upsetting them.

The wise mother saves her old magazines and catalogues for the time when her children may need them.

MATTERS BEFORE THE SURROGATE

A hearing was had before Surrogate Gilj in the surrogate's court this morning in the matter of proving the will of Julia Redding of the town of Lloyd. The will was filed some time ago and its provisions were published. The matter was adjourned until July 20 to give counsel for certain relative opportunity to determine whether objections will be filed. The will was executed July 24, 1906, and witnessed by Florence L. Hamilton, Mary E. Gilbert and J. Butler Hurlbett, all of Norwalk, Conn. A. D. & A. W. Lent appeared for the petitioner and Mr. Finn of Middletown for the contestants.

Letters of administration de bonis non on the estate of Sarah J. Keator of the town of Rochester were issued to Dr. Frank Keator of this city, her son. The value of the estate is $600 personal property. John R. DeVany appeared for the administrator.

Letters of administration on the estate of James V. Ruch, who disappeared from his home in Westchester county thirty years ago, were issued to his son-in-law, William H. Frankenberg. The estate consists of a deposit of $536.66, and interest, which had been deposited with the county treasurer to the credit of Mr. Rich. Andrew Wright. Letters of administration on the estate of James Conlon of the town of Saugerties were issued to his son, Joseph A. Conlon, of New York city. The value of the estate is $1,500 real estate and $825 personal property. John T. Cahill appeared for the administrator.

Letters of administration on the estate of Thomas F. Ledwith of the town of Saugerties were issued to his half-brother, Joseph A. Conlon, of New York city. The value of the estate is $225 personal property. John T. Cahill appeared for the administrator.

An application for letters of administration with the will annexed on the estate of Catherine A. Woolsey of the town of Rochester was filed by Ora Osterhout, in place of Elias D. Markle and Robert Woolsey, the executors named in the will, both of whom are dead, and a citation was issued returnable July 28. The value of the estate unadministered is $700. Virgil B. Van Wageningen appeared for the petitioner.

A hearing was had in the matter of the judicial settlement of the account of Murlin Abrams as administrator of the estate of Isaac Abrams of the town of New Paltz and a decree passing and approving the account was directed to be prepared. J. N. & J. H. Vanderlyn appeared for the administrator.

A hearing was had in the matter of the judicial settlement of the account of Catherine Sinnott and a decree was directed to be prepared. Byron L. Davis appeared for the administrator.

The hearings in the estates of William N. Anderson, Catherine Ann West and E. Henrietta Smith, which were set down for today, were adjourned to July 20.

Manor A. C. Won Twice.

The Manor A. C. defeated two teams on Downs Park on Sunday afternoon. In the first they beat the Centrals by the score of 6 to 5, after the contest had gone twelve innings. In the second encounter their adversaries were the Foxhall Sluggers and the score was 14 to 1. This was the second defeat for the Centrals by the Manor A. C. Next Sunday the Manor A. C. and Centrals will play the third game of the series.

The wedding of the Rev. John Neander of Gardiner and Miss Anna Bethia Leggat of St. Lambert's, Canada, took place on Tuesday, July 7, at the Church of the Transfiguration in New York, the Rev. Dr. George Clarke Houghton officiating. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Musa. Mr. and Mrs. Neander will be at home in the Gardiner parsonage about July 25.

Pleasing Recital.

A very pleasing and interesting recital was given on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. George D. Beckwith on West Chestnut street by some of the pupils of Mrs. Beckwith and Miss Ethel Mutterstock. All the selections were given from memory and the pupils reflected great credit on their teachers by the excellent rendering of their numbers.

A unique feature of the program was the pantomime poses illustrating the song "Old Black Joe." The Grecian costumes of the young ladies added much to the attractiveness of this number.

Ida Blanshan and Arthur Flemming received the prizes for the best attendance during the year.

At the close of the recital, dainty refreshments were served to the pupils.

The program follows:

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

Mrs. Anna Warner, wife of John A. Warner, died on Sunday at her home in South Rondout, aged 73 years. The funeral will be held on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at her late residence. The interment will be in Nyack.

Former Sheriff William H. Stewart of Greene county died on Saturday at his home in Athens following an operation for appendicitis. He was a member of the Elks, Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias. His wife, who was Miss Ida E. Hallenbeck, and one daughter, Harriet, wife of former Sheriff Abram Post, survive.

Rose Doyle, wife of Wilson Plue, died on Saturday at her residence on Elizabeth street, Saugerties, after a brief illness of typhoid fever, aged 43 years. She is survived by a husband and five children. Funeral will be held from her late residence on Tuesday afternoon. Interment will be in Blue Mountain cemetery.

Mrs. Amanda Auchmoody, widow of David A. Auchmoody, who owned a farm near New Paltz for many years, died on Saturday at the home of her granddaughters, Mrs. James W. Pine, in Poughkeepsie. She was 85 years old. The deceased is survived by four sons, Herman, Abram, Myron and Louis, and one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Slater of Poughkeepsie. The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, with interment at Lloyd.

Vincenzo Paletto, who was buried in the slide of a claybank at Brigham's brickyard at East Kings on several days ago, died on Sunday at the Kingston City Hospital from a broken back. His injuries were at once recognized as critical and he was brought to the Kingston City Hospital. Paletto was 23 years old and a widower. The funeral was held this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at his late home in East Kingston and at 4 o'clock at St. Colman's Church. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The body of Mrs. Wilmer Nickerson was found in the Rondout creek near the power house of the Kingston Consolidated Railroad Company at about 6 o'clock this morning. Since her disappearance early Saturday morning her husband and his father, Charles Nickerson, have been working night and day in the hope of recovering the remains. When the steamer Albany went out on a motor this morning the two were in a motor launch and dragging the waters of the creek at the foot of Abruy street. As soon as the steamer passed the disturbance in the water created by the boat's swells must have caused the body to come to the surface and the party were quick to seize it and bring it ashore. Coroner Kelly was notified and took charge of the remains. Mrs. Nickerson has been suffering from nervous prostration for the past few weeks and it is thought she took her life while suffering from mental aberration. Only a few days ago she tried to purchase a laudanum in two different stores but was refused owing to the recent drug act. Her sad death has cast a gloom over the community in Ponckhockie where she resided as she was beloved by her neighbors and friends.

Young Giants Won.

The Young Giants defeated the Young Yankees this morning by the score of 18 to 3. The line-up was as follows: L. Dugan, catcher; W. Gallagher, pitcher and third base; J. McDermott, first base; W. McCandrew, second base; E. Gallagher, short stop; B. Scanlon, pitcher and third base; E. Boyd, left field; P. Gallagher, center field; E. Baker, right field. The features of the game were the pitching of Gallagher and the fielding of Scanlon.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 13.—Although some stocks were lower at the opening of the stock market today, pronounced improvement was shown in the tone and at the end of twenty minutes trading the list was strong. Union Pacific was one of the most active and strongest of the standard shares opening 1/4 higher. Upon the next few sales, this issue rose to 166 for a net gain of 3/4. Missouri Pacific was purchased and a gain of 1/4 resulted. Exceptional weakness was apparent in American Telephone and Telegraph which sold down 1/4. New York, New Haven & Hartford, which has been under exceptional pressure lately, advanced 1/4. The Copper shares received good support. Amalgamated Copper advanced 1/4 while a gain of 3/4 was scored by American Smelting. Canadian Pacific followed its London lead, losing 1/4. United States Steel common, after beginning unchanged, scored a fractional gain, while Southern Pacific, B. R. T., St. Paul and Nevada Consolidated Copper were also slightly higher. Western Maryland declined 1/4 and the same amount of loss was suffered by Chesapeake & Ohio. The curb was steady. Americans in London were quiet.

Noon.—Movements all through the late forenoon were irregular and attention was attracted to Canadian Pacific which declined 3/4 to 136 1/4. New Haven was pressed for a decline of 1/4. Union Pacific, Chesapeake and Ohio and Missouri Pacific were down fractionally. Amalgamated Copper continued heavy and lost its early gain of half. Other issues were about unchanged.

2:30 p. m.—A number of stocks sold off sharply in the last hour. Steel sold down to 60, against 61 1/4 at the opening. Amalgamated Copper was hard hit, going to 68 1/4 for a net loss of 1 1/4. Notwithstanding the findings of the I. C. C. against New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad system, this stock went to 57 after having sold down to a point around 55. Canadian Pacific, which had declined at 1:30, sold down four points to 136. The tone was weak.

The stock market closed dull; governments unchanged; other bonds strong.

SOCIETY NOTES.

It is rarely that a more brilliant gathering assembled at the Twelfth Club than that of Saturday afternoon when the veranda of the club house presented a most brilliant appearance. Apparently the entire membership of the club was there. Mrs. Charles DeLaurie and Mrs. Frederick Sanford, assisted by Miss Sarah Horton, Miss Jeanette Sanford and the Misses Kate and Jane Van Elten, were the hostesses. The floral decorations were sweet peas and golden marigolds.

Neander-Legat.

The wedding of the Rev. John Neander of Gardiner and Miss Anna Bethia Legat of St. Lambert's, Canada, took place on Tuesday, July 7, at the Church of the Transfiguration in New York. The Rev. Dr. George Clarke Houghton officiating. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Musa. Mr. and Mrs. Neander will be at home in the Gardiner parsonage about July 25.

Pleasing Recital.

A very pleasing and interesting recital was given on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. George D. Beckwith on West Chestnut street by some of the pupils of Mrs. Beckwith and Miss Ethel Mauterstock. All the selections were given from memory and the pupils reflected great credit on their teachers by the excellent rendering of their numbers.

A unique feature of the program was the pantomime poses illustrating the song "Old Black Joe." The Grecian costumes of the young ladies added much to the attractiveness of this number.

Ida Blanshan and Arthur Flemming received the prizes for the best attendance during the year. At the close of the recital, dainty refreshments were served to the pupils.

The program follows:
Slumber Song.....Schwalm
The First Robin.....Rogers
Eleonor Reading, pupil of Miss Mauterstock.
The Tally-Ho.....Rogers
The Grasshopper.....Swift
Arthur Flemming, pupil of Miss Mauterstock.

Union Pacific was one of the most active and strongest of the standard shares opening ¼ higher. Upon the next few sales, this issue rose to 166 for a net gain of ¾. Missouri Pacific was purchased and a gain of ¼ resulted. Exceptional weakness was apparent in American Telephone and Telegraph which sold down ¼. New York, New Haven & Hartford, which has been under exceptional pressure lately, advanced ¾. The Copper shares received good support. Amalgamated Copper advanced ¼ while a gain of ¾ was scored by American Smelting. Canadian Pacific followed its London lead, losing ¼. United States Steel common, after beginning unchanged, scored a fractional gain, while Southern Pacific, B. R. T. St. Paul and Nevada Consolidated Copper were also slightly higher. Western Maryland declined ¼ and the same amount of loss was suffered by Chesapeake & Ohio. The curb was steady. Americans in London were quiet.

Noon.—Movements all through the late forenoon were irregular and attention was attracted to Canadian Pacific which declined ¾ to 186 ¾. New Haven was pressed for a decline of ¾. Union Pacific, Chesapeake and Ohio and Missouri Pacific were down fractionally. Amalgamated Copper continued heavy and lost its early gain of half. Other issues were about unchanged.

2:30 p. m.—A number of stocks sold off sharply in the last hour. Steel sold down to 66, against 61½ at the opening. Amalgamated Copper was hard hit, going to 68¾ for a net loss of 1½. Notwithstanding the findings of the I. C. C. against New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad system, this stock went to 57 after having sold down to a point around 56. Canadian Pacific, which had opened at 190, sold down four points to 186. The tone was weak.

The stock market closed dull; movements unchanged; other bonds strong.

ABOUT THE FOLKS.

Fred Pester, sister and mother have returned from an extended stay in New Jersey.

John Glynn of Abel street is spending a week in Poughkeepsie, Weehawken and New Bedford, Mass.

Mrs. Henry McNamee, Miss Adeline McNamee and Master Charles left Wednesday for Lake Hopatcong and from there will go to Siegfried, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cogan and Miss Katherine Cogan of Brooklyn are spending their vacation at the home of James Cogan on Newkirk avenue.

The Misses Lucina Bell and Anna C. Wynkoop spent Sunday with their cousin, Mrs. Edwin Rockefeller, of Germantown. They were accompanied by their mother, Mrs. R. L. Wynkoop, who will return the latter part of this week.

Maynard B. Agnew after spending a few days with his mother, Mrs. Peter Agnew, on Linderman avenue, has returned to his business in New York, accompanied by his sister, Miss Laura May Agnew, who will spend a few days in New York and Tuxedo.

LOCAL BASEBALL DOINGS.

Game Played or to be Played by the Home Teams.

The Y. M. C. A. senior team of the Twilight League will play the Lehigh baseball team at the Athletic Field on Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock and a fast game is expected.

The senior team of the Y. M. C. A. is anxious to arrange games with any amateur team in the city to play evenings and games may be arranged by calling Physical Director A. H. Christian at the Y. M. C. A. on the telephone call being 1100.

This evening at the Athletic Field at 6 o'clock the teams of the St. James Sunday school and the Trinity M. E. Sunday school will cross bats and a fast game is expected. Physical Director Christian will be present and arrange to start the game promptly. Both teams are members of the Sunday School Athletic League.

The funeral of Philip Sampson was held on Sunday evening at his late residence in New York and this morning the body was brought to this city and interred in Wiltwyck cemetery. Mr. Sampson was a member of the Order of Free sons of Israel of this city, where he formerly lived, and there were a number of members present at the interment services.

Mrs. Eben H. Atkins died on Sunday evening at her home in East Kingston, N. Y. She is survived by her husband, who is a brother of D. G. Atkins of this city, and two children. Mrs. Atkins was formerly Miss Grace Hauk of this city. The funeral will be held from the late residence on Tuesday evening with interment in the New Paltz cemetery at New Paltz on Wednesday.

At East Kingston on Sunday the East Kingston baseball nine added another victory to their already long record by defeating the Clark A. C. in the best and most exciting game played in many years on the East Kingston diamond. The battery for the Clark A. C. was J. Schultz and J. Roe, for the East Kingstons John Watzka and Thomas Adams. The visitors scored one run in the first inning and that was the first and the last time they scored. The home team failed to score until the fifth inning and the score then stood one and one until in the ninth inning Big Dick made a big hit, bringing in Vincent Redden from second and making the score at the end of the game 2 and 1. A large crowd spent a pleasant afternoon watching the game.

Manager Louis Brown of the Red Monarchs has arranged a double header with the Astors of Rhinebeck on Wednesday, when the state convention of Fife, Drum and Buble Association will be held in that village.

NAPS HAVE BEST SOUTHPAW

"The left-handed Walter Johnson." That's what Eddie Collins of the Athletics calls Vean Gregg, Nap southpaw. In an article in the American Magazine Collins discusses Gregg and other pitchers under the general subject of "Pitchers I Have Faced." Of Gregg, Collins says:

"Vean Gregg of Cleveland is one of the best southpaws I ever faced. The best compliment I can think of is to call him a left-handed Johnson. To Gregg pitching comes natural; he possesses abundant speed, but it is a wonderful curve ball that rounds him out as a great pitcher. He gave more bases on balls last year than any pitcher except Houch of the Athletics, yet his control was always perfect. Gregg's 'wildness' is

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, July 13.—Agitation for trotting tracks in public parks has been started by the Horseman Magazine, and the plan has met with such genuine approval that it is possible that many of the largest cities in the country soon will build trotting tracks in their largest park and either admit the public free, or charge them just a nominal admission price.

It was pointed out that in nearly every city of size in the country there are at least three or four parks that could very nicely contain a half mile or one mile trotting track, and that such a track, including stands, could be built at only a small cost. In each of these cities there are hundreds of horse lovers who have some rather speedy trotters and racers and these men could get together, form a club, and stage weekly races during the summer.

The races could be run off Saturday afternoon when the majority of workmen are enjoying a half holiday, and the weekly race meets, without debt, would furnish much pleasure and excitement to the workmen whose salaries are so small that they never are able to pay the prices charged for admission to the regular trotting parks when a regular meet is being conducted.

The scheme has been operative in Newark, N. J., for many years and its popularity is ever increasing. Each week during the summer amateur drivers stage races at Weequahic Park before crowds that pack the stands. The meetings give the horse owners a chance to get all the pleasure they want out of driving, a chance to get all the speed of their horses, and the exciting brushes give the spectators numerous thrills.

The park is owned and maintained by the county and the cost for upkeep is very small. For many years the Gentlemen's Driving Club, in Cleveland conducted weekly matinees that were free to the public. They held their meetings in the famous old Glenville track, and the club members stood the cost of the upkeep of the track, the printing of programs and the hiring of a band. The matinees ceased to become a feature only when the march of progress forced the owners of the track to cut it up into building lots, forcing the amateur reinsmen from the home they had for so many years.

The amateur drivers later staged their matinee at the new North Randall track about 20 miles from the heart of the city, but the workmen and their families who used to be regular attendants at the Glenville track could not afford the expense of the longer trips. If a track had been built in one of the big city parks where the car fare would only be five cents it would have meant a jammed park at every matinee.

Organized baseball is worried over the report that the Ward family, one of the principal backers of the Federal League, owns the Colonial League, a Class C organization which is operating under the protection of Organized Baseball. This league is composed of teams in the following towns: Fall River, Mass., New Bedford, Mass., Taunton, Mass., Pawtucket, R. I., Woonsocket, R. I., and Brockton, Mass. It is said that the Ward family owns the Pawtucket team outright and that it owns a controlling interest in practically every other club in the league. While scouting the report of the Ward control in their league, the Colonial officials refuse to say who are the principal backers.

"Organized baseball is beginning to regard the Baseball Players Fraternity with suspicion," according to our latest information and Organized Baseball is beginning to think a lot of unkind things about Dave Fultz, prey of the organization. It all comes about because Dave, finally possessed of a club, is forcing Organized Baseball to play fair and square with the player—something it didn't do in the days before the Federal League came into being. Now that Dave is using the Federal League as a slap stick upon organized baseball, Organized Baseball thinks Dave ought to be jailed or shanghaied or something on that order. Dave's getting too darned fresh for a young man. And, as time goes on, Dave grows fresher and sassier and more heckling. But the vast majority of the fans—and the ball players—seem to be with Dave, who is merely trying—and getting—justice for the players after many years of futile fighting.

GOT IT IN THE NECK.

Husband of Dusky Belle Too Quick for Matthew Mason.

Four arrests were made by the police on Saturday night and Sunday following a slashing match at Kingston Point when two negroes became involved in a quarrel over the affections of a dusky belle named Christine Howard. Matthew Mason thought he could win Christine from her husband, Herbert Howard, but got a slash in the neck for his pains. George Morris and John Lipscomb were mixed up in the mess and were arrested by Policeman Reardon and Welch, who gathered in Herbert also. Both were discharged and Herbert was sent to jail for one hundred days. Christine was also brought before the bar of justice and pleaded guilty to assisting in the disorder. She got a sentence of six months in jail but was allowed to go under suspended sentence if she would get out of town at once.

"Poke" Wells in Jail.

Charles Wells, familiarly known as "Poke," was arrested by Policeman Hess for being a disorderly person on Wurts street. He got fifteen days in jail. Wells was making a nuisance of himself at the Sisters' Academy on that street.

Differentiate Blood Spots.

Medical jurists had until recently no certain means of distinguishing the blood of a man from that of, say, a dog. Research, however, has evolved a new and most subtle process whereby, in the case of fresh blood, at any rate, absolute differentiation can now be achieved.

K. OF C. DEFEATED BY HIGH FALLS

On Sunday the K. of C. baseball team was defeated by the High Falls club in one of the fastest games ever seen on those grounds. It was a pitchers' game from the start. Crispell, who was doing the twirling for the home boys, held the K. of C. to one scratch hit in seven innings, when he allowed them two hits, which coupled with an error and much argument netted them their only run of the game, while High Falls got to Culleton for one run in both the third and fourth innings and three hits and two runs in the eighth. The features of the game were the batting of Meyers for High Falls, getting three hits out of four times at bat, and the pitching of Crispell, allowing the visitors only three hits, one of which was a scratch; also two lightning double plays pulled off by the High Falls boys. The batteries for High Falls, Crispell and O'Neill. K. of C. Culleton and Whalen. The score:

MENKE'S DAILY
SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, July 13.—Agitation for trotting tracks in public parks has been started by the Horseman Magazine, and the plan has met with such genuine approval that it is possible that many of the largest cities in the country soon will build trotting tracks in their largest park and either admit the public free, or charge them just a nominal admission price.

It was pointed out that in nearly every city of size in the country there are at least three or four parks that could very nicely contain a half mile or one mile trotting track, and that such a track, including stands, could be built at only a small cost. In each of these cities there are hundreds of horse lovers who have some rather speedy trotters and racers and these men could get together, form a club, and stage weekly races during the summer.

The races could be run off Saturday afternoon when the majority of workmen are enjoying a half holiday, and the weekly race meets, without debt, would furnish much pleasure and excitement to the workmen whose salaries are so small that they never are able to pay the prices charged for admission to the regular trotting parks when a regular meet is being conducted.

The scheme has been operative in Newark, N. J., for many years and its popularity is ever increasing. Each week during the summer amateur drivers stage races at Weequahic Park before crowds that pack the stands. The meetings give the horse owners a chance to get all the pleasure they want out of driving, a chance to get all the speed of their horses, and the exciting brushes give the spectators numerous thrills.

The park is owned and maintained by the county and the cost for upkeep is very small. For many years the Gentlemen's Driving Club, in Cleveland conducted weekly matinees that were free to the public. They held their meetings in the famous old Glenville track, and the club members stood the cost of the upkeep of the track, the printing of programs and the hiring of a band. The matinees ceased to become a feature only when the march of progress forced the owners of the track to cut it up into building lots, forcing the amateur reinmen from the home they had for so many years.

The amateur drivers later staged their matinees at the new North Randall track about 20 miles from the heart of the city, but the workmen and their families who used to be regular attendants at the Glenville track could not afford the expense of the longer trips. If a track had been built in one of the big city parks where the car fare would only be five cents it would have meant a jammed park at every matinee.

Organized baseball is worried over the report that the Ward family, one of the principal backers of the Federal League, owns the Colonial League, a Class C organization which is operating under the protection of Organized Baseball. This league is composed of teams in the following towns: Fall River, Mass., New Bedford, Mass., Taunton, Mass., Pawtucket, R. I., Woonsocket, R. I., and Brockton, Mass.

It is said that the Ward family owns the Pawtucket team outright and that it owns a controlling interest in practically every other club in the league. While scouting the report of the Ward control in their league, the Colonial officials refuse to say who are the principal backers.

"Organized baseball is beginning to regard the Baseball Players Fraternity with suspicion," according to our latest information and Organized Baseball is beginning to think a lot of unkind things about Dave Fultz, prey of the organization. It all comes about because Dave, finally possessed of a club, is forcing Organized Baseball to play fair and square with the player—something it didn't do in the days before the Federal League came into being.

Now that Dave is using the Federal League as a slap stick upon organized baseball, Organized Baseball thinks Dave ought to be jailed or shanghaied or something on that order. Dave's getting too darned fresh for a young man. And, as time goes on, Dave grows fresher and sassier and more heckling. But the vast majority of the fans—and the ball players—seem to be with Dave, who is merely trying—and getting—justice for the players after many years of futile fighting.

Cadiz Case Adjourned.

Elmer Cadiz, who was arrested last week by Policeman Ryan for discharging a firearm on O'Reilly street, was arraigned this morning before Recorder Grogan. He pleaded not guilty and the matter was adjourned for one week. The defendant was paroled in the custody of his counsel, former Mayor Irwin.

GOT IT IN THE NECK.

Husband of Dusky Belle Too Quick for Matthew Mason.

Four arrests were made by the police on Saturday night and Sunday following a slashing match at Kingston Point when two negroes became involved in a quarrel over the affections of a dusky belle named Christine Howard. Matthew Mason thought he could win Christine from her husband, Herbert Howard, but got a slash in the neck for his pains. George Morris and John Lipscomb were mixed up in the mess and were arrested by Policeman Beardon and Welch, who gathered in Herbert also. Both were discharged and Herbert was sent to jail for one hundred days. Christine was also brought before the bar of justice and pleaded guilty to assisting in the disorder. She got a sentence of six months in jail but was allowed to go under suspended sentence if she would get out of town at once.

"Poke" Wells in Jail.

Charles Wells, familiarly known as "Poke," was arrested by Policeman Hens for being a disorderly person on Wurts street. He got fifteen days in jail. Wells was making a nuisance of himself at the Sisters' Academy on that street.

Differentiate Blood Spots.

Medical jurists had until recently no certain means of distinguishing the blood of a man from that of, say, a dog. Research, however, has evolved a new and most subtle process whereby, in the case of fresh blood, at any rate, absolute differentiation can now be achieved.

K. OF C. DEFEATED
BY HIGH FALLS

On Sunday the K. of C. baseball team was defeated by the High Falls club in one of the fastest games ever seen on those grounds. It was a pitchers' game from the start. Crispell, who was doing the twirling for the home boys, held the K. of C. to one scratch hit in seven innings, when he allowed them two hits, which coupled with an error and much argument netted them their only run of the game, while High Falls got to Culleton for one run in both the third and fourth innings and three hits and two runs in the eighth. The features of the game were the batting of Meyers for High Falls, getting three hits out of four times at bat, and the pitching of Crispell, allowing the visitors only three hits, one of which was a scratch; also two lightning double plays pulled off by the High Falls boys. The batteries for High Falls, Crispell and O'Neill. K. of C. Culleton and Whalen. The score:

CONSISTENT HITTER WITH THE YANKS.

Roy Hartzell.
New York, July 13.—Roy Hartzell, the star left fielder for the New York Americans, is one of the most consistent hitters in the league. Hartzell is said to be the best utility man for the Yanks. His work with the team has won him many friends among the fans.

Therein is the Difference.
A highbrow can retire to his study and emerge with the announcement that he has discovered a subconscience cosmos, and we call it new thought. But a lowbrow can spend five years exploring an unknown continent and claim to have discovered new animal called the snigglebluk and we are unanimous that it is old bunk.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Inexpensive Joy.
The amount of joy in one's life is not at all dependent upon the amount of money one spends. A man can get just as much fun, for instance, out of lying about the height of his tomato plants as he can out of pursuing the same course with respect to his mileage per gallon of gasoline.

BUSINESS NOTICE.

A new form of paper ballot will be used for state and local offices at the election of November, 1914. This ballot is a very difficult affair to vote. In addition there will be another ballot for voting for eighteen Delegates to the Constitutional Convention. Still further, there will be another ballot for voting on some questions.

The Legislature has provided by the new law, that where paper ballots are used, the districts must be made much smaller, as the voting will be very slow. Even then, there is likely to be great trouble and confusion, as a glance at the new ballot will at once show.

In addition to this trouble to the voters there will be a large added expense to the taxpayers.

But by installing Voting Machines there will be no trouble in handling the vote under the present districts, as an examination of the machine now on exhibition will show. All three ballots will be voted on the machine.

The Automatic Registering Machine Corporation has made the offer to the City of Kingston to furnish an entire equipment of machines and to take as payment for them whatever they will save in election expenses until they are paid for.

ASHOKAN LAKE AS IT IS TODAY

Old Villages Covered With Water.
But a Vast Amount of Work Yet to be Done Before the Big Reservoir Can be Filled.

With the villages of Brodhead's Bridge, Olive Bridge, Shokan and West Shokan in the west basin of the Ashokan reservoir and part of the village of West Hurley in the east basin, hidden under the rising waters the beautiful valley of the Esopus for nearly seven miles of its length presents a strange picture to the host of summer visitors in the mountains as they gaze at the large lake that has been formed and try to locate the site of the farm houses where they spent many a happy vacation in years past.

At the present time the water at the foot of the big main dam at Brown's Station is about ninety feet deep and it has not been allowed to rise higher on account of the work still to be done. In order that the rising water may not interfere with the work still uncompleted it is being turned into the east basin and there is very little if any water finding its way back into the Esopus creek below the big dam.

Indications seem to point to the fact that there is at least two years work to be done before the reservoir will finally be completed and there are nearly two thousand men still employed. Work on the north and south boulevards is being pushed forward. The road which will run across on top of the dividing weir between the east and west basins has been built on the north to a point where the weir will end when finally completed. The entire reservoir will be fenced in with wire strung between concrete posts. Practically all of the posts have been placed in position and the work of stringing the wires is under way.

Probably the most interesting feature of the reservoir is the big dam at Brown's Station. The dam was completed some time ago but there is considerable work to be done on the dyke connecting the big dam with the dividing weir, which also is not completed. From the top of the main dam a fine view may be obtained of the rising water which extends beyond where the old village of Shokan stood. As one looks up the valley the creek resembles a huge lake with here and there the green nose of the higher elevations lifted above the water forming islands and promontories, while looking down from the dam a view of the small sized city in which are housed the workers may be had. On each side of the old creek bed the banks are steep and the big buildings of the contractors on the north side are still in operation and the water will be kept from rising to where they stand until they are removed.

The concrete work on the dyke connecting the big dam with the dividing weir is finished but dirt and stone is being filled in against the core wall to raise the dyke to the same height as the big dam. There is also considerable ground inside the dyke and dividing weir to be cleared off before the water is allowed to rise to that level.

But one or two houses are still left standing in the big west basin inside the water line and they will also be removed. There are still a number of houses left standing on the higher elevations above the water line which are being used to house some of the laborers on the work.

At the present time there is considerable water impounded in the big east basin, but there is still considerable land to be cleared off. The water in the basin covers part of the old site of the village of West Hurley.

Work on the aerators is still under way. This of course will be the show feature of the completed reservoir, as in a large space will be set the many fountains which all the year round will play high in the air before the water plunges down into the long dark tube leading to the big city. These fountains will be located on the site of the old railroad station at Brown's Station. These aerating fountains will not only purify the water but will prevent the tremendous pressure that comes upon the dam and dykes exerting its bursting strength upon the aqueduct, which is the huge concrete tube molded on iron frames and intended to carry the water to the big city.

Another interesting place which attracts numbers of visitors is the big camp where the laborers and workers are housed. The better class of workers occupy bungalows. These bungalows while only of temporary construction are fitted up with modern bath room and running water. They are usually built of from four to six rooms. Every street in the camp is named and the houses are all numbered. There are probably about five hundred of these houses erected in the camp.

Just outside the taking line of the reservoir new villages have sprung up and especially on the northern side of the reservoir a number of houses have been built. At Ashokan the new station of the relocated Ulster & Delaware railroad a very pretty village has been built near the station and a large number of new houses and stores have been built. A number of the houses, however, have been rebuilt having been torn down in the old villages swept away by the city of New York and the timber used to erect new residences on other sites.

About a mile above Ashokan the new village of Shokan sprung from the ruins of the old and removed back outside of the taking line. One surprising thing is the fact that there are not enough houses in the new village for the inhabitants and a number are forced to live in barns remodeled into temporary residences for which the owners are receiving rents amounting to $5 a month. The houses that are rented are netting good returns to the owners who are receiving from $12 to $30 a month rent depending upon the size and number of rooms in the house. This is remarkably big rent for houses in small villages. Many of the new residences that have been built outside the taking line are of modern construction and are well built.

The town of Olive voted "dry" but every day in the year huge auto trucks pass through Ashokan and Shokan loaded with beer and going towards the reservoir.

The work of building the road around the reservoir is being pushed forward and large gangs of men are working on both the south and north boulevards as they are called. The view from the south boulevard will probably be the finest as the road runs closer to the reservoir and a better view of the lake may be obtained. While the work of constructing the new roads is underway the contractors have provided suitable detours of fairly good dirt roads and the Automobile Club of Ulster county has erected a large number of road signs directing the traveller.

While the view of the reservoir from the northern boulevard is not so good as from the southern boulevard still after leaving new Shokan the view of the mountains and the creek below is of great beauty. Driving along the new road one may stop and glance down into the big west basin where the old villages of Shokan and West Shokan stood but which are now covered with water and if acquainted with the former sites of the villages may be able to locate with some degree of certainty the site of old farm houses and stores. Above the water level the trees and bushes have been left standing and here and there one may still see the orchards that have been left standing.

The water extends but a short distance above the old village of Shokan and the creek at that point is very low and as one looks down upon it from the northern boulevard the water does not seem to be over a few feet in depth. While there has been considerable rain the past few weeks yet there has not been enough to raise the water in the creek to any extent.

Probably the finest view of the completed reservoir will be obtained when the new road over the dividing weir has been completed. At the present time in order to reach Brown's Station a temporary road has been built at the foot of the dividing weir and running along its base until near the big main dam when the road curves up over a hill leading past the McClellan monument and striking Virginia avenue in the camp. From the road to be built on top of this dividing weir a view of both the east and west basins will be obtained.

The view from the top of the McClellan monument is exceptionally fine and a number of visitors climb the stairs leading to the top. The entrance door is usually kept locked but one may obtain the key at the office of the contractors. This monument is a huge stone pile reaching high in the air and was built in honor of Mayor McClellan under whose administration the work of building the Ashokan reservoir was started in 1905.

The work of clearing out the basins of the reservoir is still underway and the trees and shrubs are piled in huge heaps and then fired, and the smoke from the burning piles may be seen long distances as it curls slowly up into the heavens. Unless the water from the big reservoir is needed in the big city it is expected that the huge basins will be flushed out before they are allowed to fill to the water level.

A trip to the big reservoir is well worth while and a better idea is then obtained of the huge task that has been undertaken by the city of New York and which is rapidly nearing completion.

Consuls Aid Education.

That many of our diplomatic and consular representatives abroad are rendering a very real service in obtaining information on foreign educational movements is the belief of the U. S. Bureau of Education. The bureau acknowledges that it counts on the diplomatic and consular service for a considerable part of the matter on foreign schools it publishes every year for the sake of American school men who can not go abroad but who need to know what other countries are doing educationally. By special arrangement with the Department of State, the Bureau of Education receives all reports forwarded by consuls or other diplomatic agents on educational subjects.

Many of these reports supplement admirably the official documents obtainable. Recently Ambassador Joseph E. Willard furnished the bureau with a statement of educational conditions in Spain, which contained interesting references to the character of university instruction, especially in medicine. The report shows not only a discriminating knowledge of educational requirements generally, but a special knowledge of educational conditions in Spain.

Some of the most useful material in the field of vocational education has been furnished through consular advice. Bulletin 56, 1913, of the Bureau of Education, contained statements on industrial education by consuls at Erfurt, Nuremberg, Frankfurt and Cologne. The article by Ralph C. Busser, consul at Erfurt, on "The System of Industrial Schooling in Germany," is considered one of the best summaries of the subject ever published, and has proved particularly useful to American school authorities considering the establishment of systems of industrial education.

Other articles in this bulletin are special reports on schools for builders, courses for "master craftsmen," the Trade Institute at Cologne, and schools for fruit growing.

Consuls in England and Scotland are sending special information on the social welfare work that is now a prominent feature of school activity in those countries. Much of this material is so new it has scarcely begun to find its way into printed reports. Some of the consuls specialize in educational subjects in which they are most interested. Thus, at Stavanger, Norway, the U. S. Consulate is especially keen on furnishing information about the school extension work that is one of the characteristics of education in Scandinavian countries.

In Central and South America, United States consuls keep the bureau informed of changes in educational policy as indicated in presidential messages, decrees, etc. Much of this information throws light on current American problems.

It has often been urged in the past that each consulate have an "educational attaché" to report on educational matters, but in the opinion of Bureau of Education officials the consuls themselves and their subordinates are fully qualified to keep the United States informed on important educational work abroad. Representatives of the Bureau of Education who have recently gone to Germany, Switzerland, Denmark and the British Isles report that they found not only the courteous helpfulness that would be expected in agents of our government, but frequently, in addition, a special knowledge of the educational situation in the countries for which information was desired.

A Ten-Cent Fireless Cooker.

In the August Woman's Home Companion appears a part of a page containing descriptions of homemade fireless cookers. Those foods which can be best prepared in fireless cookers are soups, cereals and stewed fruits. A New York city woman describes, as follows, a homemade fireless cooker which can be made at an expense of ten cents:

"It consists of a two foot deep tin flour canister—bought at a sale in a five-and-ten cent store—lined with seventy thicknesses of common newspaper, and provided with two clean old woolen blanket ends which are used to wrap around vessels containing the food to be cooked. 'First I cut the newspapers the exact height of the canister, leaving them at their ordinary width; then I lined the canister as smoothly as if the paper had been plaster, putting in one sheet at a time and lapping the ends closely, but not all in the same place, for so much doubling would have made an awkward hump. The last few sheets I bradded top and bottom with paper fasteners.

"Then a seventy-fold newspaper mat was made for the bottom of the canister, made to fit accurately, so that the edges left not the tiniest air spaces between them and the linings of the sides. The cover of the canister was fitted in the same way, with the addition of a heavy circle of blotting paper pasted over the newspaper pad and its turned-in edges glued to the tin rim of the cover. Now the cooker was ready for use.

"I used three small enameled pails for cooking vessels. While washing the breakfast dishes, I set the pails with their prepared contents on the lighted gas range to give them five minutes start. A stew should always be placed in the middle of the cooker, where the heat is retained longest. When placing food in the cooker, one of a woolen cloth went around the first bucket very snugly, so that it had to be crowded down with force; the other end wrapped the middle bucket just as tightly. The second cloth both wrapped and covered the last bucket."

MONTICELLO DISASTERS.

One Dead and Many Injured in Various Ways.

Lightning killed Herbert Hammett of Brooklyn, a claim agent in the Hudson terminal building, in a telephone booth at a hotel in Monticello Saturday evening. Mrs. Louise Phillips of New York city, who was standing nearby, was made unconscious for several hours by the bolt and may die. Hammett had been a summer boarder for twenty years at the hotel. One of the proprietors of the hotel who was in the room at the time when the lightning struck it, escaped with a slight shock.

Albert D. Bailey, postmaster at Kiamasha Lake, was blown through the roof of the engine house of the water company there by the explosion of the cylinder of a twenty horse power engine which he was repairing as machinist. Several bones in his body were broken and he may lose the sight of both eyes.

Louis Zion, eighteen years old, of New York, son of the proprietor of a summer hotel here, was drowned when bathing alone in the hotel's private swimming pool. The body was discovered by a patron of the hotel in six feet of water.

Roy Bailey, aged seventeen years, fell upon a pitch fork and two times eight inches long broke from the fork and lodged in the flesh about the hips. The tines were removed by surgeons. Bailey will survive. Less than a year ago Bailey was shot in the side by a boy companion and many shots were removed from his chest.

Lightning killed two horses at the county almshouse and set fire to the barns. The almshouse which shelters many aged inmates, was saved by the fire department.

Suffragettes at the Fair.

The suffragists of the county have engaged a booth on the midway at the Ulster county fair at Ellenville, August 11-14, from which they will sell votes for women novelties, distribute free literature and make frequent inquiries start. They have also announced that they will enter a decorated float, or motor in the floral parade to compete for one of the big prizes for the best decorated vehicle.

ASHOKAN LAKE AS IT IS TODAY

Old Villages Covered With Water.
But a Vast Amount of Work Yet to be Done Before the Big Reservoir Can be Filled.

With the villages of Brodhead's Bridge, Olive Bridge, Shokan and West Shokan in the west basin of the Ashokan reservoir and part of the village of West Hurley in the east basin, hidden under the rising waters the beautiful valley of the Esopus for nearly seven miles of its length presents a strange picture to the host of summer visitors in the mountains as they gaze at the large lake that has been formed and try to locate the site of the farm houses where they spent many a happy vacation in years past.

At the present time the water at the foot of the big main dam at Brown's Station is about ninety feet deep and it has not been allowed to rise higher on account of the work still to be done. In order that the rising water may not interfere with the work still uncompleted it is being turned into the east basin and there is very little if any water finding its way back into the Esopus creek below the big dam.

Indications seem to point to the fact that there is at least two years work to be done before the reservoir will finally be completed and there are nearly two thousand men still employed. Work on the north and south boulevards is being pushed forward. The road which will run across on top of the dividing weir between the east and west basins has been built on the north to a point where the weir will end when finally completed. The entire reservoir will be fenced in with wire strung between concrete posts. Practically all of the posts have been placed in position and the work of stringing the wires is under way.

Probably the most interesting feature of the reservoir is the big dam at Brown's Station. The dam was completed some time ago but there is considerable work to be done on the dyke connecting the big dam with the dividing weir, which also is not completed. From the top of the main dam a fine view may be obtained of the rising water which extends beyond where the old village of Shokan stood. As one looks up the valley the creek resembles a huge lake with here and there the green nose of the higher elevations lifted above the water forming islands and promontories, while looking down from the dam a view of the small sized city in which are housed the workers may be had. On each side of the old creek bed the banks are steep and the big buildings of the contractors on the north side are still in operation and the water will be kept from rising to where they stand until they are removed.

The concrete work on the dyke connecting the big dam with the dividing weir is finished but dirt and stone is being filled in against the core wall to raise the dyke to the same height as the big dam. There is also considerable ground inside the dyke and dividing weir to be cleared off before the water is allowed to rise to that level.

But one or two houses are still left standing in the big west basin inside the water line and they will also be removed. There are still a number of houses left standing on the higher elevations above the water line which are being used to house some of the laborers on the work.

At the present time there is considerable water impounded in the big east basin, but there is still considerable land to be cleared off. The water in the basin covers part of the old site of the village of West Hurley.

Work on the aerators is still under way. This of course will be the show feature of the completed reservoir, as in a large space will be set the many fountains which all the year round will play high in the air before the water plunges down into the long dark tube leading to the big city. These fountains will be located on the site of the old railroad station at Brown's Station. These aerating fountains will not only purify the water but will prevent the tremendous pressure that comes upon the dam and dykes exerting its bursting strength upon the aqueduct, which is the huge concrete tube molded on iron frames and intended to carry the water to the big city.

Another interesting place which attracts numbers of visitors is the big camp where the laborers and workers are housed. The better class of workers occupy bungalows. These buildings while only of temporary construction are fitted up with modern bath room and running water. They are usually built of from four to six rooms. Every street in the camp is named and the houses are all numbered. There are probably about five hundred of these houses erected in the camp.

Just outside the taking line of the reservoir new villages have sprung up and especially on the northern side of the reservoir a number of houses have been built. At Ashokan the new station of the relocated Ulster & Delaware railroad a very pretty village has been built near the station and a large number of new houses and stores have been built. A number of the houses, however, have been rebuilt having been torn down in the old villages swept away by the city of New York and the timber used to erect new residences on other sites.

About a mile above Ashokan the new village of Shokan sprung from the ruins of the old and removed back outside of the taking line. One surprising thing is the fact that there are not enough houses in the new village for the inhabitants and a number are forced to live in barns remodeled into temporary residences for which the owners are receiving rents amounting to $5 a month. The houses that are rented are netting good returns to the owners who are receiving from $12 to $30 a month rent depending upon the size and number of rooms in the house. This is remarkably big rent for houses in small villages. Many of the new residences that have been built outside the taking line are of modern construction and are well built.

The town of Olive voted "dry" but every day in the year huge auto trucks pass through Ashokan and Shokan loaded with beer and going towards the reservoir.

The work of building the road around the reservoir is being pushed forward and large gangs of men are working on both the south and north boulevards as they are called. The view from the south boulevard will probably be the finest as the road runs closer to the reservoir and a better view of the lake may be obtained. While the work of constructing the new roads is underway the contractors have provided suitable detours of fairly good dirt roads and the Automobile Club of Ulster county has erected a large number of road signs directing the traveller.

While the view of the reservoir from the northern boulevard is not so good as from the southern boulevard still after leaving new Shokan the view of the mountains and the creek below is of great beauty. Driving along the new road one may stop and glance down into the big west basin where the old villages of Shokan and West Shokan stood but which are now covered with water and if acquainted with the former sites of the villages may be able to locate with some degree of certainty the site of old farm houses and stores. Above the water level the trees and bushes have been left standing and here and there one may still see the orchards that have been left standing.

The water extends but a short distance above the old village of Shokan and the creek at that point is very low and as one looks down upon it from the northern boulevard the water does not seem to be over a few feet in depth. While there has been considerable rain the past few weeks yet there has not been enough to raise the water in the creek to any extent. Probably the finest view of the completed reservoir will be obtained when the new road over the dividing weir has been completed. At the present time in order to reach Brown's Station a temporary road has been built at the foot of the dividing weir and running along its base until near the big main dam when the road curves up over a hill leading past the McClellan monument and striking Virginia avenue in the camp. From the road to be built on top of this dividing weir a view of both the east and west basins will be obtained.

The view from the top of the McClellan monument is exceptionally fine and a number of visitors climb the stairs leading to the top. The entrance door is usually kept locked but one may obtain the key at the office of the contractors. This monument is a huge stone pile reaching high in the air and was built in honor of Mayor McClellan under whose administration the work of building the Ashokan reservoir was started in 1905.

The work of clearing out the basins of the reservoir is still under way and the trees and shrubs are being removed. The smoke from the burning piles may be seen long distances as it curls slowly up into the heavens. Unless the water from the big reservoir is needed in the big city it is expected that the huge basins will be flushed out before they are allowed to fill to the water level.

A trip to the big reservoir is well worth while and a better idea is then obtained of the huge task that has been undertaken by the city of New York and which is rapidly nearing completion.

AUTO ACCIDENT AT WAWARSING

Ex-Sheriff Fulton of Sullivan County Seriously Injured When Car Ran Into the Creek—Steering Gear Out of Order.

Ex-Sheriff James A. Fulton of Wurtsboro, Sullivan county, received four fractured ribs and internal injuries Sunday morning, when the steering gear of his automobile became out of order as he was crossing the Wawarsing bridge and his machine, after making a semi-circle, ran down the bank into the Rondout creek and tipped over, with the owner underneath the engine and radiators.

Ex-Sheriff Fulton at the time of the accident was on his way to Kingston to call on his daughter, Mrs. Chauncey S. Main, of No. 162 Pine street, who with her family he intended to take back with him to Wurtsboro. He is not regarded as out of danger, but unless complications set in he will probably recover.

The Wawarsing bridge is one of the most dangerous for automobilists to cross of all the bridges in Ulster county. It is dangerous because it is necessary to make a sharp turn to get on the bridge in coming from either direction, and the sides of the bridge bear many scars and contain bits of paint scraped from the sides of many automobiles that have been unable to make the curve at the exact angle necessary to get on the structure.

With Mr. Fulton on his trip to Kingston was James Budd of Wurtsboro. They made the sharp turn necessary to get on the bridge, but the steering gear evidently went wrong as they prepared to make the other turn at the further end of the bridge. Mr. Fulton, who was driving the car, turned the wheel to take the curve, and then, as the curve was completed, he attempted to turn it back so as to take the straight stretch of road, but the gear went wrong. The automobile kept going in a circular line, off the road and toward the creek. There is a gentle slope of land toward the creek for a short distance, and then a drop of about six feet.

When the machine reached the creek bank, it had almost stopped from the brakes which Mr. Fulton had applied immediately upon his realization that the gear was wrong, but the car went a few inches too far and toppled over.

Ex-Sheriff Fulton was thrown forward and partly out of the car as it turned, and was caught under the heavy part containing the engine and radiator. Four ribs on his right side were fractured and he also suffered internal injuries, but Mr. Budd, who was also thrown out of the car, escaped without a scratch.

The car was lifted off Mr. Fulton and he was carried into the house of Mr. Munson nearby, and Dr. B. Franklin Neal and Dr. G. F. Wilklow of Ellenville were summoned. They found Mr. Fulton suffering excruciating pain and made as thorough an examination as possible. The fractures were reduced and Mr. Fulton was made as comfortable as possible. He will be removed to Ellenville within a day or two, and will rest there before being taken to his home at Wurtsboro.

Mrs. Main, his daughter, was notified of the accident, and with her husband went to Wawarsing later. She will remain with her father until his removal home.

To Widen Prince Street.

The flag shanty of the Ulster & Delaware railroad at O'Reilly street and Haebrouck avenue has been moved to the opposite side of O'Reilly street. The city intends widening Prince street at that junction to avoid the dangerous crossing occasioned by the railroad tracks and the trolley road. The land at that point is owned by the city and adjoining the municipal building which houses the city ambulance and patrol and the street department's outfit.

HOW THE HOUSEWIFE CAN SAVE HERSELF LABOR.

It is a trying task to cut gowns or skirts of crepe de chine, silk muslin, soft silks or any material which has a tendency to draw or slip on the table, and if you would greatly obviate the difficulty of cutting such goods, first cover the table with a felt or heavy cloth.

In renovating feather pillows first open one corner of the ticking and pour boiling water in. This renders the feathers a kind of pulpy wet mass, which can be easily handled. Have ready some soapy water and take the feathers out and thoroughly wash them in this, using more soap if necessary. Then thoroughly rinse them in several waters and put back into the washed cover and hang it out in the hot sun.

With a long, clean stick you can turn them occasionally through the opened corner. As the sun's heat dries the feathers they will swell to fill the cover and be wonderfully light and fluffy and perfectly clean without being scattered at all, which invariably happens when they are handled dry.

A neat and very satisfactory way to keep patterns is to file them away in a twenty-five cent letter file. Keep this way (flat) they are not found rolled or torn when the housewife needs them, and they are very easily found if the patterns of one class are filed away together.

Some housekeepers aver that if a room is filled with smoke it can be easily cleared by waving above one's head a towel that has been dashed in hot water and vinegar and then wrung out. Used in a fanning fashion, it is said to accomplish the work in a few minutes. Only a little vinegar in a small quantity of water is required for the wetting of the towel.

HOUSEHOLD KINKS.

How to Circumvent Troublesome Dampness.

There are to be had in the shops small glass salt shakers that are fitted with glass perforated tops that screw into position. These are especially useful in the damp days that always come in the spring after the furnace fires are first discontinued, for it is then that salt becomes moist and sticky. As the salt collects the moisture in the air it causes the silver top of the salt shaker to oxidize. Every housekeeper knows that it is a physical impossibility to keep silver topped salt shakers bright in damp weather, and this is the reason. The little glass topped shakers obviate this trouble and are a time saving introduction.

There are many ways of keeping salt from sticking in damp weather. One way is to mix the salt with cornstarch or flour; but, of course, this weakens the saline quality of the substance in the salt dish. A better way is to put half a dozen kernels of rice in the salt shaker. This rice absorbs, to some extent, the moisture and so keeps the salt moderately dry. It is hardly expedient to use kernels of rice in open salt dishes, and in these four or cornstarch is the best thing. It is a good plan to keep salt dishes of all descriptions in a warm, dry place between meals. This will do much to keep them from collecting dampness. The salt should be changed whenever it seems sticky. It can be dried and used in cooking.

Cheesecloth bags filled with charcoal, which collects moisture, should be hung about in damp places. The charcoal can be dried in the oven from time to time to keep it in good condition. Charcoal can be kept in boxes or jars of cereals to collect moisture and keep them dry.

Keep wafers and crackers and other things that easily become soggy where it is warm. If there is a coal fire in the kitchen the shelf over the kitchen stove is a good place to keep things that should be crisp and dry. In a kitchen that has a gas stove only they can be dried out occasionally in the oven.

BE YOUR OWN DOCTOR.

How to Make a Pleasant Cough Syrup That Will Relieve Irritation.

Have you a troublesome cough that does not yield readily to the remedies you have tried? The following has proved excellent in many cases: Mix about an eighth of a teaspoonful of Hungarian paprika with a teaspoonful of strained honey and swallow the mixture. Sometimes relief follows immediately, and the pleasant sensation of warmth is most grateful when the cough is accompanied by the usual symptoms of a cold or the grip. The dose can be taken twice a day.

How to Satisfactorily Roast a Chicken.

In roasting any bird place the breast down in the pan when first put in the oven. By so doing the juice will run out of the back into the breast, making it more juicy, instead of the juices from the white meat settling in the backbone, as happens when a bird is placed back down in the pan.

JOLLY CHALLENGES O. I. WONDERMUCH

Russell Champion Invites Critic of the Free Movies to Meet Him in Joint Debate.

Pastor R. Grant Jolly of New York city addressed large crowds at the Kingston Opera House, Saturday afternoon and evening. On account of the local interest concerning Pastor Russell's teachings, which according to Mr. Jolly's belief, has been largely aroused by the letters of "O. I. Wondermuch," he devoted his afternoon lecture to a consideration of this subject. He prefaced his address by the following challenge:

"In view of the apparent interest aroused among the citizens of Kingston in the teachings of Pastor Russell, by the letters of O. I. Wondermuch, and in order that the matters of Bible doctrine concerning which he takes issue, may be fairly and openly presented to the public from both sides, I feel it incumbent in the interests of the truth and Christian decency to submit the following challenge. Whether his real name is O. I. Wondermuch, or O. I. Blundermuch, I would like to see the man face to face in broad daylight, and believing that the citizens of Kingston would also like to see him muster up enough moral courage to step forth from his fictitious name, I hereby challenge the said gentleman to meet me in public debate in a suitable auditorium in Kingston, in which I will gladly stand half of the necessary expenses.

"My address, which I am not ashamed to give, is Brooklyn Tabernacle, 13-17 Hicks street, Brooklyn, N. Y. If Mr. Wondermuch accepts the challenge, the public will be able to hear his contention discussed in the interests of the truth, from both sides; if he does not accept, the public, if they can ever find out who he is, will realize that he is either ashamed to stand in public defense of his statements, or that he has not the truth to back him up."

After admitting that Pastor Russell, together with Wesley, Luther, Calvin, Huss, St. Paul (Acts 24:14), and the Lord himself, were all called heretics and persecuted as such on account of their strange doctrines, Pastor Jolly spoke in brief as follows: "Perhaps no man in the history of the world," said the speaker, "has won greater publicity during the space of his own lifetime than has Pastor Russell. His extensive tours and free Bible lectures, his sermons, which reach twenty million people each week through over two thousand newspapers, and his famous Studies in the Scriptures, now translated into nineteen languages, which he has given by the million to the public at less than cost, together with his much-talked-of photo-drama of Creation, which is being shown in the largest theatres in the country, to millions of people, free of charge—all these generous philanthropies have made Pastor Russell well known and much loved by the majority of his countrymen."

The lecturer then referred to the fact that some considered Pastor Russell's teachings dangerous and detrimental to a proper faith in the Bible. If this be so, the speaker said it would be well for us to beware of his doctrines, however much we might admire the man. The speaker then invited his audience to join with him in a fair and impartial examination of Pastor Russell's teachings in the light of the scriptures. He treated on what he deemed the seven cardinal points.

First, Pastor Russell's conception of God. While many were said to be drifting into the worship of a "nature God," or some abstract principle such as "the all-good," Pastor Russell was said to earnestly contend for the God of the Bible, the personal God, who created all things, who loves His creatures and plans for their highest welfare.

Pastor Russell's views concerning the Bible were next considered. He was said to be most positive in his convictions concerning the inspiration of the scriptures, thus bringing upon himself the hatred and persecution of many opposing ministers and higher critics. "Noah and the Flood," continued the speaker, "is considered by many to be a myth, while the account of Jonah and the Whale is generally conceded to be the biggest fish story ever told. Pastor Russell, however, points to the Lord's own words regarding Noah and Jonah, as proof that those who deny the veracity of the original accounts are in fact denying the Lord's own statements of the same and repudiating Him as a false teacher. It is for the public to decide whether or not Pastor Russell takes the correct view."

Concerning Man, Pastor Russell's views were said to differ from those of the evolutionists in that he still holds to the Biblical statement that man was created in God's image instead of being evolved from a monkey prototype. His fall from a monkey brought death, from which his only hope of deliverance lies in a resurrection. The subject of the Ransom was next considered. Pastor Russell was said to be a firm believer in the divinity of Christ, not that Jesus as a human being was divine, but that He left the glory He had with the Father, was made flesh, offered Himself as a human being in sacrifice at Jordan, and there became the Christ, the Anointed of God, begotten by the Holy Spirit to the divine nature. Since Adam forfeited human life, Jesus gave up His human existence as a ransom, a corresponding price. He was at His resurrection rewarded by the Father with the divine nature to which He was begotten at Jordan.

In examining Pastor Russell's views on future punishment, the lecturer said that many accuse the Brooklyn pastor of not being "orthodox," in that he does not teach the red-hot hell of the Dark Ages. "Pastor Russell," continued the speaker, "does not go to the creeds of the Dark Ages, but to the Bible, to get his orthodox views. He believes in the Bible hell, which according to every concordance and lexicon means the tomb, the grave, the condition of death, oblivion. He teaches that the future punishment described in the Bible is not eternal in torment, but eternal death, "the second death." "All the wicked will God destroy." Psalm 145:20. "They shall be as though they had not been."—Obadiah 16.

After a brief discussion of Pastor Russell's teachings respecting the church, his views concerning the world were examined. Without advocating a second chance for any, he was said to set forth from the Scriptures the hope of one fair chance for every individual of the human race. If Jesus is "that true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world," then sooner or later, according to Pastor Russell, every man will receive that true light, with full privilege to accept or reject. While heaven is promised to the church, Pastor Russell's thought was shown to be that earth will be the everlasting habitation of the human race in general. Many Scriptures were quoted in support of this position, showing that paradise lost will be paradise restored, and that whosoever will may have full perfection and eternal happiness, in the "new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness."

ORANGE PARADE NOT MOLESTED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Belfast, Ireland, July 13.—This was a day filled with tragic possibilities for Ireland on account of the high feeling attending the unparalleled celebration of Orangemen's day. The anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne fell yesterday, but, owing to the fact that it was Sunday, the demonstration was put off until today with the exception of special services in the Protestant Churches.

Although elaborate ceremonies had been planned for every community in Ulster province, the attention of the entire United Kingdom was focused on Belfast, where Sir Edward Carson, the Unionist leader of the anti-Home Rule forces led 50,000 marchers through the city to Drumberg.

The automobile in which Sir Edward sat, was flanked by armed despatch bearers on bicycles and the morning sun flashed brilliantly over the barrels of the carbines strapped to their backs.

Sir Edward's face was set in stern lines, but there was a glint of satisfaction as he looked upon the long ranks of marchers, all of whom had pledged themselves to fight upon the field of battle, if necessary to prevent the inclusion of Ulster province within the operation of the Home Rule for Ireland bill. The procession was led by a brass band and at intervals, throughout the ranks, other bands played martial music. Above the ranks, rose endless banners bearing such inscription as:

"No home rule for Ulster."

"We will not submit to home rule."

Orange flags floated over the marchers and most of the houses flanking the streets through which the procession moved were draped with bunting. Pictures of Sir Edward Carson, Captain James Craig and other Unionist leaders were displayed conspicuously.

The weather was fair and the streets were crowded with spectators.

More than 5,000 regular and special policemen and detectives were on duty. The entire military force of the district was held under emergency orders in the barracks by Major General Sir Cecil MacReady.

Special orders had been issued to both police and soldiery to exercise the strictest caution and abstain from any action which might infuriate the Orangemen into action.

The Tory press in today's issue carried long patriotic exhortations to the Unionists to stand shoulder to shoulder in this time of peril.

A circumstance which stood out was the fact that, while the British Isles have been looking forward to this occasion with the deepest dread for many weeks, the actual celebration of the day began without any disorder. There were several cases of individual trouble when Unionist sympathizers and Nationalists settled their political disputes in the old-fashioned manner with fistcuffs and a number of arrests were made, but they were not of a serious character.

For the most part the Catholics and home rulers among the Protestants remained in doors, or if they appeared on the streets regarded the enthusiasm of the Unionists with passive indifference.

Sir Edward Carson was the hero of the Orangemen and the procession which escorted him to Drumberg was seven miles long. The Unionist leader made an impassioned speech declaring that blood would be shed before Ulster would submit to home rule.

Constantinople's Mosques. There are three hundred mosques in Constantinople, of which the 15 royal ones are regarded as the finest in the world. The meaning of the name of Turkey's capital is "city of Constantine." The most noted of the mosques is that of St. Sophia, the first ancient existing Christian church, which was converted into a mosque in 1453 on the capture of the city by the Turks under Mohammed II.

Permanent Reformation. Biggs—"Hello, old man, how are you? Haven't seen you for a long time. How's your brother doing? Has he pulled himself up yet?" Miggs—"Do you know that my brother has given up smoking, drinking, gambling, and all bad habits, and has gone to a quiet little place in the country?" Biggs—"You don't say so! Where?" Miggs—"To the graveyard."

Are You Eating Squabs Regularly?

You ought to. They are delicious. Squabs are young pigeons only four weeks old. Perhaps you have bought in the markets old pigeons, often offered as squabs. They are comparatively tough and stringy. The genuine squabs, such as we sell, are right out of the nest, fat, plump, juicy, weighing from fourteen ounces to a pound apiece. They are fully feathered. Same as old birds. Squabs are highly esteemed as an article of food because the juice of the squab (which is pure liquid protoplasm) is the most nourishing and vitalizing fluid known. In fact there is no bird or flesh food that can equal the squab for condensed nourishment. We can supply squabs at any time on receipt of your order. Prices 75 cents per pair, by parcel post 15 cents extra.

The speaker then invited his audience to join with him in a fair and impartial examination of Pastor Russell's teachings in the light of the scriptures. He treated on what he deemed the seven cardinal points. First, Pastor Russell's conception of God. While many were said to be drifting into the worship of a "nature God" or some abstract principle such as "the all-good," Pastor Russell was said to earnestly contend for the God of the Bible, the personal God, who created all things, who loves His creatures and plans for their highest welfare.

Pastor Russell's views concerning the Bible were next considered. He was said to be most positive in his convictions concerning the inspiration of the scriptures, thus bringing upon himself the hatred and persecution of many opposing ministers and higher critics. "Noah and the Flood," continued the speaker, "is considered by many to be a myth, while the account of Jonah and the Whale is generally conceded to be the biggest fish story ever told. Pastor Russell, however, points to the Lord's own words regarding Noah and Jonah, as proof that those who deny the veracity of the original accounts are in fact denying the Lord's own statements as a false and repudiating Him as a false teacher. It is for the public to decide whether or not Pastor Russell takes the correct view."

Concerning Man, Pastor Russell's views were said to differ from those of the evolutionists in that he still holds to the Biblical statement that man was created in God's image instead of being evolved from a monkey prototype. His fall from perfection brought death, from which his only hope of deliverance lies in a resurrection.

The subject of the Ransom was next considered. Pastor Russell was said to be a firm believer in the divinity of Christ, not that Jesus as a human being was divine, but that He left the glory He had with the Father, was made of flesh, offered Himself as a human being in sacrifice at Jordan, and there became the Christ, the Anointed of God, begotten by the Holy Spirit to the divine nature. Since Adam forfeited human life, Jesus gave up His human existence as a ransom, a corresponding price. He was at His resurrection rewarded by the Father with the divine nature to which He was begotten at Jordan.

In examining Pastor Russell's views on future punishment, the lecturer said that many accuse the Brooklyn pastor of not being "orthodox," in that he does not teach the "red-hot hell of the Dark Ages." "Pastor Russell," continued the speaker, "does not go to the creeds of the Dark Ages, but to the Bible, to get his orthodox views. He believes in the Bible hell, which according to every concordance and lexicon means the tomb, the grave, the condition of death, oblivion. He teaches that the future punishment described in the Bible is not eternal in torment, but eternal death, "the second death." "All the wicked will God destroy." Psalm 145:20. "They shall be as though they had not been."—Obadiah 16.

After a brief discussion of Pastor Russell's teachings respecting the church, his views concerning the world were examined. Without advocating a second chance for any, he was said to set forth from the Scriptures the hope of one fair chance for every individual of the human race. If Jesus is "that true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world," then sooner or later, according to Pastor Russell, every man will receive that true light, with full privilege to accept or reject. While heaven is promised to the church, Pastor Russell's thought was shown to be that earth will be the everlasting habitation of the human race in general. Many Scriptures were quoted in support of this position, showing that paradise lost will be paradise restored, and that whosoever will may have full perfection and eternal happiness, in the "new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness."

ORANGE PARADE NOT MOLESTED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Belfast, Ireland, July 13.—This was a day filled with tragic possibilities for Ireland on account of the high feeling attending the unparalleled celebration of Orangemen's day. The anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne fell yesterday, but, owing to the fact that it was Sunday, the demonstration was put off until today with the exception of special services in the Protestant Churches.

Although elaborate ceremonies had been planned for every community in Ulster province, the attention of the entire United Kingdom was focused on Belfast, where Sir Edward Carson, the Unionist leader of the anti-Home Rule forces led 50,000 marchers through the city to Drumbragh.

The automobile in which Sir Edward sat, was flanked by armed despatch bearers on bicycles and the morning sun flashed brilliantly over the barrels of the carbines strapped to their backs.

Sir Edward's face was set in stern lines, but there was a glint of satisfaction as he looked upon the long ranks of marchers, all of whom had pledged themselves to fight upon the field of battle, if necessary to prevent the inclusion of Ulster province within the operation of the Home Rule for Ireland bill. The procession was led by a brass band and at intervals, throughout the ranks, other bands played martial music. Above the ranks, rose endless banners bearing such inscription as:

"No home rule for Ulster."
"We will not submit to home rule."

Orange flags floated over the marchers and most of the houses flanking the streets through which the procession moved were draped with bunting. Pictures of Sir Edward Carson, Captain James Craig and other Unionist leaders were displayed conspicuously.

The weather was fair and the streets were crowded with spectators. More than 5,000 regular and special policemen and detectives were on duty. The entire military force of the district was held under emergency orders in the barracks by Major General Sir Cecil MacReady.

Special orders had been issued to both police and soldiery to exercise the strictest caution and abstain from any action which might infuriate the Orangemen into action.

The Tory press in today's issue carried long patriotic exhortations to the Unionists to stand shoulder to shoulder in this time of peril. A circumstance which stood out was the fact that, while the British Isles have been looking forward to this occasion with the deepest dread for many weeks, the actual celebration of the day began without any disorder. There were several cases of individual trouble when Unionist sympathizers and Nationalists settled their political disputes in the old-fashioned manner with fistcuffs and a number of arrests were made, but they were not of a serious character.

For the most part the Catholics and home rulers among the Protestants remained in doors, or if they appeared on the streets regarded the enthusiasm of the Unionists with passive indifference.

Sir Edward Carson was the hero of the Orangemen and the procession which escorted him to Drumbragh was seven miles long. The Unionist leader made an impassioned speech declaring that blood would be shed before Ulster would submit to home rule.

Are You Eating Squabs Regularly?

You ought to. They are delicious. Squabs are young pigeons only four weeks old. Perhaps you have bought in the markets old pigeons, often offered as squabs. They are comparatively tough and stringy. The genuine squabs, such as we sell, are right out of the nest, fat, plump, juicy, weighing from fourteen ounces to a pound apiece. They are fully feathered. Same as old birds. Squabs are highly esteemed as an article of food because the juice of the squab (which is pure liquid protoplasm) is the most nourishing and vitalizing fluid known. In fact there is no bird or flesh food that can equal the squab for condensed nourishment. We can supply squabs at any time on receipt of your order. Prices 75 cents per pair, by parcel post 15 cents extra.

HOSPITAL METHODS

There are many points of similarity between our big dental offices and hospitals. Our three offices treat from thirty to forty thousand patients each year. This number seems fabulous to a private practitioner.

Another similarity is that our offices are all equipped with the latest apparatus, light, electrical appliances, dental chairs, etc., etc., and each one is manned by a skillful corps of operators and dental nurses.

After every operation, however small a dental nurse cleans up the operating room and sterilizes all of the instruments used.

This means that there must be several operating rooms, but all this service aids us in permitting many operations each day in a methodical and aseptic manner.
